The Risen Christ:
Has Jesus of Nazareth Been Distorted?

Jesus’ figure, as it emerges from the gospels of Matthew, Mark and Luke, is the figure of a rabbi, a teacher of the Law in the purest tradition of the people of Israel (Jn 3:2). Although, later on, the first Christian Community gave more importance to the conflicts with the Pharisees than actually occurred, they did not forget that Jesus’ teaching was very close to the teaching of the Pharisees on many points (Mk 2:16; 12:28; 12:32). Both disciples and opponents saw him as a self-taught master of the law (Jn 7:15). How then did we go from there to the figure of Christ as it appears particularly in Paul’s letters: the Lord of history, the new Adam, the one who received the ineffable “Name”?

The apostles believed in the resurrection of Jesus and so did the entire Christian community who were born of this conviction. There was no doubt that he was the Messiah; people also believed that he was God’s Son in a very special sense, different from what the Jews understood by this term. A long time was needed to draw all the inferences from this. This passage was undoubtedly more difficult for those who had known Jesus personally and who had seen him through the eyes of their Jewish culture, not because Jesus was not utterly Jewish, including his way of teaching, but because what they loved in him was preventing them from seeing beyond.

They certainly recognized themselves in James’ letter, the most “Jewish” of the apostolic writings. While acknowledging Jesus as “our Lord,” the author of the letter sees Jesus first as the teacher of a new law which included the best of the Old Testament (2:1 and 8). With the help of the impact of the Nazareth group, the “brothers of Jesus,” the Christian communities of Palestine would grow fond of this image they had of the Galilean rabbi. He had risen, of course, but he had not set the world clock back to zero, and his heritage was first of all an example of doing good, not just teaching the Law.

Within just a few generations, these “Judeo-Christians” would find themselves like strangers to the faith of the Church whose center had moved from Jerusalem to Antioch, then to Rome. It is there that Paul played a decisive role that he himself did not choose. He did not invent Christ the Lord and Redeemer: he was already present in Peter’s first proclamations (Acts 2:32-36; 3:15). Paul, however, had not been influenced (and at the same time limited) by the image and the words of the Galilean rabbi. On the contrary, his conversion had been an encounter with God himself in the person of Jesus, and he saw the Master’s itinerant preaching as the first stage of a wider destiny (2 Cor 5:16).

If Jesus had not risen, he would have remained a teacher; until then, his words were perhaps more important than he himself was. But his body disappeared from the tomb; this first-ever happening did not fit into the laws of the universe. So the visions of the resurrected one conveyed but one message: Jesus, the Lord! This went far beyond Jeremiah exultant in glory or Elijah taken up to heaven. On the day of Pentecost Peter said that God had raised his holy servant (Acts 3:15) and he added: “God has made him Lord.” Before long Jesus will be recognized as “the son of the woman taken up to heaven to seize the book of history” (Rev 12:5; 5:7). Paul and John have authority to speak about him because they are true witnesses; both of them were privileged to get a glimpse of the above (Rev 4:1; 2 Cor 12:2).

From that moment, it was knowing who Jesus was that gave the understanding of his words, because he was God born of God. From that point on, his whole human adventure was a new beginning.

Therefore, when Paul speaks of Christ as the “image of God” (Col 1:15), he is not primarily inviting us to find the goodness of the Father in Jesus’ gestures: instead he is thinking more directly about the Son who, from the beginning, is the manifestation, the projection and the active wisdom of the forever invisible God. Christ is the one who passed through our history and our time so that, through him, all of creation including humankind would be seen as part of the divine mystery (Col 1:20).

In the gospels, Jesus chose to be the proclaimer of the Reign of God. With Paul, however, there is not just kingdom, but our life in the risen Christ (Col 3:1). There we see the gap between Christian faith and the position of the non-Christian Jews who were the most sympathetic toward Jesus and acknowledged him as one of their own. Paul was not the one who built a wall of misunderstanding; the scandal was found in Jesus’ resurrection as well as in his death on the cross.

These are not less scandalous for today’s Christians. Although we have faith, at times we are besieged by doubt: is all of that certain? Many books written by unbelievers, or even by educated Christians, will reinforce our doubts: “The resurrection? There is no other basis than an empty tomb—and do we even know that? Yet, all these reasons do not overcome a deep-seated conviction in the hearts of believers. Then, people interpreted; they believed; they saw.... To say that he had risen was a way of exalting him and of reasserting the hope of the community…” A sense of God tells them that truth is found in the mystery rather than in the interpretations that seek to do away with it (1 Jn 2:27).

We have just said “a sense of God,” because it is not a matter of human feeling: we believe, which means first of all that we receive the testimony of the apostles and of the Church, and we believe the way they did. If we welcome faith, God will not leave us alone with our doubts, there is also an added promise: the gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:18). There can be no lasting faith without a spiritual experience (Heb 12:18-24), and this is even truer for those living in a culture impervious to faith, as we are.
Some persons praise the first Christians as if they had been models of all virtue. In fact, there were no more miracles then than now. Here as elsewhere, Paul addresses men and women living in a world as real as our own. Corinth had its own particular character among the Mediterranean cities. Situated on a tongue of land separating two gulfs, it had the best part of its privileged site. The two ports of the east and west had been joined by a kind of paved way on which boats were pulled by means of enormous wagons drawn by bullocks. This spared sailors having to detour to Greece by the south: a very long voyage at the time and very dangerous. Obviously it had to be paid for; this financially benefited the town; it also needed labor which meant many slaves. The city had a sanctuary dedicated to the goddess Aphrodite, the goddess of “love” for the Greeks, around which had developed (with the help of money) a prostitution that had nothing sacred about it other than its name. The prostitutes were counted in the thousands. Quite near Corinth, there was a sportive celebration—rather similar to the Olympic Games of our day—every two years. This drew large crowds of people. We notice in these two letters of Paul very clear allusions to these different aspects of Corinthian history: slavery, prostitution, stadium sports.

In Corinth, there existed a dynamic, though not well ordered Church, composed of Jews and Greeks converted by Paul. Many of them were in danger of returning to the vices of their former lives, once the enthusiasm of their first years as Christians had worn off. Those responsible in the Church apparently were not capable of dealing with many problems: internal divisions and doubts about faith. They therefore called upon Paul, who wrote the present letter, because he could not interrupt his work in Ephesus.

We notice the authority with which Paul, from afar, leads the Church in the name of Christ; also his manner of teaching: before answering any question, he reasserts the foundations of the faith.

The Corinthians, in the midst of a pagan world, were concerned about matters that are again relevant in our times:
- about celibacy and marriage,
- about living together with those who do not share the Christian faith, – about conducting the assemblies, for both the celebration of the Eucharist and the use of “spiritual gifts,”
– about the resurrection of the dead.
1 From Paul, called to be an apostle of Christ Jesus, by the will of God, and from Sosthenes, our brother, to God’s Church which is in Corinth; to you, whom God has sanctified in Christ Jesus, and called, to be holy, together, with those, who, everywhere, call upon the name of our Lord Christ Jesus, their Lord and ours.
3 Receive grace, and peace from God, our Father, and Christ Jesus, our Lord.
4 I give thanks, constantly, to my God, for you, and for the grace of God given to you, in Christ Jesus. 5 For you have been fully enriched, in him, with words, as well as with knowledge, even as the testimony concerning Christ was confirmed in you. 6 You do not lack any spiritual gift and only await the glorious coming of Christ Jesus, our Lord. 8 He will keep you steadfast to the end, and you will be without reproach, on the day of the coming of our Lord Jesus. 9 The faithful God will not fail you, after calling you to this fellowship with his Son, Christ Jesus, our Lord.

Divisions among the faithful
10 I beg of you, brothers, in the name of Christ Jesus, our Lord, to agree among yourselves, and do away with divisions; please be perfectly united, with one mind and one judgment.
11 For I heard from people, of Cloe’s house, about your rivalries. 12 What I mean is this: some say, “I am for Paul,” and others: “I am for Apollos,” or “I

* 1.1 From Paul called to be an apostle… to God’s church which is in Corinth… with those who everywhere call upon the name of our Lord Christ Jesus. With these three expressions Paul defends his authority. He reminds the Corinthians, so easily entrenched in their rivalries, that they are part of a greater reality, the Universal Church of God.

Called to be holy (v. 2). You have to become holy, but you already are. Holy, in the biblical sense, is the person or thing that belongs to God. The baptized have been consecrated to God and form part of the people who belong to God, the assembly of the holy ones, which is the Church.

God’s call does not allow them to remain as they are. Their conscience readily adapted to the moral norms of their milieu, but now, God’s call demands a renunciation of a certain vision of existence based on ‘the natural.’ They will have to be orientated, as best they can, towards an ideal of life found in the person of Christ.

In Christ. A single Greek preposition used by Paul is to be translated into English as in or through or with, according to the case. “In Christ” has many meanings:
– We are sons and daughters of God, made after the image of the only Son of God, and God loves us in Christ.
– God the Father saves us through Christ.
– The Father calls us to share with Christ his inheritance.
– We have become part of the body of Christ; we live in Christ and have received his Spirit.
– The word “Christian,” used for the first time in Antioch (Acts 11:26) to denote the disciples of Christ, was still not widely used; often in Christ means Christian. So “marry in Christ” signified “to marry in a Christian way.”

See Paul’s acts of thanksgiving in verses 4-9: what certitude of riches present in a community where all is far from perfect!

In his advice to the Corinthians, Paul shows us how to act when reviewing the activities of our parish or our apostolic group. Instead of being discouraged by the problems we face and accusing one another when something fails, the first thing to do is to remember what we already have in common.

These communities, in fact, like our own had to face their problems and their weakness. Each generation of Christians must learn to follow Jesus and “build Church,” or better still “be Church.”

He will keep you steadfast to the end (v. 8). The hope that maintains the “tone” of faith is the return of Christ. The first Christian generation expected to witness his glorious coming: he would judge the world and take his own with him (1 Thes 4:13).

10. The first sin of the Church is the division among believers. Several apostles (see 12:28) passed through Corinth. Certain members of the community profited by this to affirm their own identity by declaring allegiance to one leader rather than another: a way of satisfying vanity and the need of self-assertion.

Agree among yourselves and do away with divisions (v. 10): be a united family. This admonition is understood when the Church is a community sharing the same concerns. It is a little am for Peter,” or “I am for Christ.” 13 Is Christ divided, or have I, Paul, been baptized in the name of Paul? 14 I thank God that I did not baptize any of you, except Crispus and Gaius, so that no one can say that he was baptized in my name. 15 Well, I have also baptized the Stephanas family. Apart from these, I do not recall having baptized anyone else.

The folly of the cross

• 17 For Christ did not send me to baptize, but to proclaim his gospel. And not with beautiful words! That would be like getting rid of the cross of Christ. 18 The language of the cross remains nonsense for those who are lost. Yet for us who are saved, it is the power of God, as Scripture says: I will destroy the wisdom of the wise and make fail the foresight of the Sages. 19 Masters of human wisdom, educated people, philosophers, you have no reply! And the wisdom of this world? God let it fail.

20 At first, God spoke the language of wisdom, and the world did not know God through wisdom. Then God thought of saving the believers, through the foolishness that we preach.

22 The Jews ask for miracles and the Greeks for a higher knowledge, while we proclaim a crucified Messiah. For the Jews, what a great scandal! And for the Greeks, what nonsense! 23 But he is Christ, the power of God, and the wisdom of God, for those called by God among both Jews and Greeks.

25 In reality, the “foolishness” of God is wiser than humans, and the “weakness” of God is stronger than humans.

26 Brothers and sisters, look and see whom God has called. Few among you can be said to be cultured or wealthy, and few belong to noble families. 27 Yet God has chosen what the world considers foolish, to shame the wise; he has chosen what the world considers weak, to shame the strong.

28 God has chosen common and unimportant people, making use of what is nothing, to nullify the things that are, so, that, no mortal may boast before of esoteric doctrines and some people in the Church see in faith the means of acceding to a higher knowledge. So Paul will tell them that all Christian wisdom is contained in the cross. That would be like getting rid of the cross of Christ (v. 17). The cross should be present in the message we preach and in the way we preach it.

Moreover in evangelization it will always cost us to work with poor resources in a world subject to media. We need to count on the grace of God because we are weak and without titles of prestige. It will cost us to remind our communities of the poverty of Jesus and to be criticized by those who are well off in the world.

See whom God has called (v. 26). The Church of Corinth is formed of ordinary people: this is their strength. Everybody has his place and his mission in the Church. Ordinary people and poor communities, often persecuted and calumniated, have a primary role in the evangelization of the world. God wants them to evangelize the rich and at times, even the hierarchy.
God. 30 But, by God’s grace, you are in Christ Jesus, who has become our wisdom from God, and who makes us just and holy and free. 31 Scripture says: Let the one who boasts boast of the Lord.

2 • 1 When I came to reveal to you the mystery of God’s plan, I did not count on eloquence or on a show of learning. 2 I was determined, not to know anything among you, but Jesus, the Messiah, and a crucified Messiah. 3 I, myself, came; weak, fearful and trembling; 4 my words, and preaching, were not brilliant, or clever to win listeners. It was, rather, a demonstration of spirit and power, 5 so, that, your faith might be a matter, not of human wisdom, but of God’s power.

The Spirit teaches us wisdom

• 6 In fact, we do speak of wisdom to the mature in faith, although it is not a wisdom of this world or of its rulers, who are doomed to perish. 7 We teach the mystery, and secret plan, of divine wisdom, which God destined from the beginning, to bring us to glory. 8 No ruler of this world ever knew this; otherwise, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. 9 But as Scripture says: Eye has not seen, ear has not heard, nor has it dawned on the mind, what God has prepared for those who love him. 10 God has revealed it to us, through his Spirit, because the Spirit probes everything, even the depth of God.

11 Who, but his own spirit, knows the secrets of a person? Similarly, no one, but the Spirit of God, knows the secrets of God. 12 We have not received the spirit of the world, but the Spirit who comes from God and, through him, we understand what God, in his goodness, has given us.

13 So we speak of this, not in terms inspired by human wisdom, but in a language taught by the Spirit,

• 2.1 I myself came weak, fearful and trembling (v. 3). Paul indeed must have felt weak when for the first time he was bringing the Gospel to a brilliant Greek city well used to slavery and immorality. We experience the same feelings towards the evangelization of the modern world; preparation is important but what is it to prepare ourselves? Paul invites us to accept the mystery of the cross and to find there the strength of the Spirit.

It was a demonstration of spirit and power (v. 4). The power of spirit, the power of prayer, the power of suffering. The Spirit is poured out after Jesus has suffered and died. With him, we can expect everything. Healings and miracles are worthless (and the devil takes advantage of them) unless they affirm faith in Jesus crucified, acting through the humble, and present in the poor.

• 6. Paul never intended to be considered a wise or eminent speaker by his audience. Yet he speaks of wisdom to the mature in faith (v. 6). The text says in more precise terms: “to the perfect ones.” At that time, several religions were calling “perfect” any believer who had received some secret information not given to all the members of the sect. In the Church also some considered themselves as belonging to a higher class of believers because of gifts of the Spirit they had received, especially if they were able to speak endlessly on matters of faith.

Paul opposes them with his own gifts as prophet and apostle. He is capable of teaching these essential truths which need few words but which can only be presented by those who have experienced the living God. What are these secrets? Firstly, what God is for us and what God wishes to give us (vv. 7 and 12).

Christian faith proposes that which no human doctrine, no religion could have given us. At times, comparing ourselves with those who follow a spiritual way outside Christianity, it would seem that we are saying the same thing with different words. This is partly true regarding our attitudes and our choices in life, but we should not be afraid to confess the riches God has given us in Christ: his Spirit gives us what no one has ever penetrated.

Such knowledge is not intellectual, it is a gift of the Spirit that sows and develops in us the one and only truth. It is very difficult to give an explanation of a truly spiritual experience. We can only speak of wisdom to those who have attained a certain spiritual level. That is why Paul tells the Corinthians that most of them are unable to criticize him.
explaining a spiritual wisdom to spiritual persons. 14 The one who remains on the psychological level does not understand the things of the Spirit. They are foolishness for him; and he does not understand, because they require a spiritual experience. 15 On the other hand, the spiritual person judges everything, but no one judges him. 16 Who has known the mind of God so as to teach him? But we have the mind of Christ.

There are many workers, the building is one 3

1 I could not, friends, speak to you as spiritual persons but as fleshly people, for you are still infants in Christ. 2 I gave you milk, and not solid food, for you were not ready for it, and, up to now, you cannot receive it, 3 for you are still of the flesh. As long as there is jealousy and strife, what can I say, but that you are at the level of the flesh, and behave like ordinary people.

4 While one says: “I follow Paul,” and the other: “I follow Apollos,” what are you, but people still at a human level? 5 For what is Apollos? What is Paul? They are ministers; and through them, you believed, as it was given by the Lord, to each of them. 6 I planted, Apollos watered the plant, but God made it grow. 7 So neither the one who plants nor the one who waters is anything, but God, who makes the plant grow.

8 The one who plants and the one who waters work to the same end, and the Lord will pay each, according to their work. 9 We are fellow-workers with God, but you are God’s field and building.

- 10 I, as a good architect, according to the capacity given to me, I laid the foundation, and another is to build upon it. Each one must be careful how to build upon it. 11 No one can lay a foundation other than the one which is already laid, which is Jesus Christ. 12 Then, if someone builds with gold upon this foundation, another, with silver and precious stones, or with wood, bamboo or straw, 13 the work of each one will be shown for what it is. The day of Judgment will reveal it, because the fire will make everything known. The fire will test the work of everyone. 14 If your work withstands level (v. 14). (Paul says precisely: “the psychic man”) does not reach the truth of Christ. However, the spiritual person, not necessarily the intellectual person, knows by gift of God the things of God.

The spiritual person judges everything but no one judges him (v. 15). He who sees has no way of convincing the blind person that there are colors. He sees them, however, and knows that if the blind person does not see them, it is not because the thing is doubtful, but because the blind person has neither eyes nor criteria for that. It is the same with the spiritual person and the carnal one.

- 3.10 As a good architect I laid the foundation. Paul is founder of churches and others come after him, apostles, prophets or teachers, to preach and encourage the people. Paul is not jealous, but it could be that some of them seek their own prestige, forgetting that the Church belongs only to God. It could also be that the believers compare one apostle with another, and do this readily inasmuch as they are ignorant of what apostolic work really is.

Fire will test the work of everyone (v. 13). This image suggests many things. To Paul as well as to the readers the day of God’s judgment seemed to be imminent and everyone thought that God would purify and cleanse the world by fire. So Paul concludes that whatever we did not do according to the will of God and with the means he wanted will be destroyed by fire. Remember what happened with many apostolic projects that were but a smoke screen (how many tons of documents fit for the fire!). To serve Christ without really pure intentions, will not merit hell of course, but a personal purification will be necessary. This text supports the belief in Purgatory, that is, a process of purification at the time of death or after death for all whose transformation by the Spirit of God was only half-concluded (see commentary on Mt 5:21).
the fire, you will be rewarded;
15 but if your work becomes ashes, you will pay for it. You will be saved, but it will be as if passing through fire.

- 16 Do you not know that you are God’s temple, and that God’s Spirit abides within you? 17 If anyone destroys the temple of God, God will destroy him. God’s temple is holy, and you are this temple.

Do not divide the Church

- 18 Do not deceive yourselves. If anyone of you considers himself wise in the ways of the world, let him become a fool, so that he may become wise. 19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness in God’s eyes. To this, Scripture says: God catches the wise in their own wisdom. 20 It also says: The Lord knows the reasoning of the wise, that it is useless.

- 21 Because of this, let no one boast about human beings, for everything belongs to you; 22 Paul, Apollos, Cephas—life, death, the present and the future. Everything is yours, 23 and you, you belong to Christ, and Christ is of God.

4 Let everyone, then, see us as the servants of Christ, and stewards of the secret works of God.
2 Being stewards, faithfulness shall be demanded of us; 3 but I do not mind if you, or any human court, judges me. I do not even judge myself; 4 my conscience, indeed, does not accuse me of anything, but that is not enough for me to be set right with God: the Lord is the one who judges me.

- 5 Therefore, do not judge before the time, until the coming of the Lord. He will bring to light whatever was hidden in darkness, and will disclose the secret intentions of the hearts. Then, each one will receive praise from God.

- 6 Brothers and sisters, you forced me to apply these comparisons to Apollos and to myself. Learn by this example, not to believe yourselves superior by siding with one against the other. 7 How, then, are you more than the others? What have you that you have not received? And if you received it, why are you proud, as if you did not receive it?

Comforted Christians and harassed apostles

- 8 So, then, you are already rich and satisfied, and feel like kings, without us! I wish you really were kings, so that we might enjoy the kingship with you!

- 16. Do you not know that you are God’s temple? Christ is the new Temple that takes the place of the temple of the Jews (Jn 2:19 and Mk 15:38). The Temple of God is Christ because in him abides all the divine Mystery. The Temple of God is likewise the Church because in her the Holy Spirit is working. The Temple of God is also each home and each believer (see 6:19) because the Spirit lives in each one of them.

- 18. Everything is yours and you belong to Christ (v. 23). We have here a decisive word on Christian freedom.

On the other hand, remember what non-believing philosophers have said: People created God out of their own misery. Whatever was lacking in order for them to feel great and happy, they attributed to a superior being, who had everything. In worshiping him, they felt identified with him and forgot their own misery. This theory is not completely false: in fact people make idols for themselves, be they singers, athletes or politicians; and they feel happy when their idols have and do everything they themselves cannot do or have. They die for causes not their own and they feel proud of people and institutions that exploit them. A Christian is wary of authority becoming idols: he exists and thinks for himself. Even in the Church he is face to face with God with no other intermediary but Christ, and he does not indulge in the cult of personalities.

- 4.8 The Corinthians feel rich in their faith, rich in their spiritual gifts. They have made fair progress in the road of knowledge, and as people expert in the matter, they charitably look down on Paul, the poor Jewish preacher. The apostle knows that his own culture and
It seems to me, that God has placed us, the apostles, in the last place, as if condemned to death, and as spectacles for the whole world, for the angels as well as for mortals.

We are fools for Christ, while you show forth the wisdom of Christ. We are weak, you are strong. You are honored, while we are despised.

Until now we hunger and thirst, we are poorly clothed and badly treated, while moving from place to place. We labor, working with our hands. People insult us and we bless them, they persecute us and we endure everything; they speak evil against us, and ours are works of peace. We have become like the scum of the earth, like the garbage of humankind until now.

I do not write this to shame you, but to warn you, as very dear children. Because, even though you may have ten thousand guardians in the Christian life, you have only one father; and it was I who gave you life in Christ through the gospel.

Therefore, I pray you, to follow my example. With this purpose, I send to you Timothy, my dear and trustworthy son in the service of the Lord. He will remind you, of my way of Christian life, as I teach it in all churches, everywhere.

Some of you thought that I could not visit you and became very arrogant. But I will visit you soon, the Lord willing, and I will see, not what those arrogant people say, but what they can do. Because the kingdom of God is not a matter of words, but of power. What do you prefer, for me to come with a stick, or with love and gentleness?

Expel the immoral brother!

1 You have become news, with, a case of immorality, and such a case, that is not even found among pagans. Yes, one of you has taken, as wife, his own stepmother. And you feel proud! Should you not be in mourning, instead, and expel the one who did such a thing?

For my part, although I am physically absent, my spirit is with you and, as if present, I have already passed sentence on the man who committed such a sin.

Let us meet together, you and my spirit, and in the name of our Lord Jesus, and with his power, you shall deliver strong personality would have given him a bright future. He sees at the same time the narrow-mindedness of his adversaries but allows them to make fun of him. They think he is a fool, and in a way he is. However, even if taken for a fool he brought them to Christ.

Paul knows that such a sinner cannot be brought to repentance unless he experiences the bitterness of his treachery. So the community must ask that he suffer in health and belongings (Paul says “delivered to Satan for the ruin of the flesh:” see in Job 1:12 and 2:6 for the meaning of delivered to Satan). This excommunication is not merely a human gesture. What the Church binds on earth is bound in heaven (Mt 18:18). God is committed to send trials that may be at the same time a warning to the Church and a way of repentance for the sinner.

You should be unleavened bread. The believers have been spiritually raised with Christ. As the Jews used unleavened bread to celebrate the Passover, in the same way the Christians have to be, in a figurative sense unleavened bread, that is, they must lead a sinless life before God, and so worthily celebrate their Passover, which is the Resurrection of Christ. Jesus compared the kingdom of heaven to yeast that leavens the whole mass. Here Paul uses the same comparison to show how evil spreads everywhere. The authorities of the Church are not strong enough to prevent anyone from committing a sin. Only the Church can judge a sinner and expel him from the Church.
him to Satan, for the destruction of the flesh, so that his spirit be saved in the day of Judgment.

6 This is not the time to praise yourselves. Do you not know that a little yeast makes the whole mass of dough rise? 7 Throw out, then, the old yeast and be new dough. If Christ became our Passover, you should be unleavened bread. 8 Let us celebrate, therefore, the Passover, no longer with old yeast, which is sin and perversity; let us have unleavened bread, that is purity and sincerity.

9 In my last letter I instructed you not to associate with immoral people. 10 I did not mean, of course, those who do not belong to the church and who are immoral, exploiters, embezzlers or worshipers of idols. Otherwise, you would have to leave this world. 11 What I really meant was, to avoid, and not to mingle with anyone who, bearing the name of brother or sister, becomes immoral, exploiter, slanderer, drunkard, embezzler. In which case, you should not even eat with them.

12 Why should I judge outsiders? But you, are you not to judge those who are inside? 13 Let God judge those outside, but as for you, drive out the wicked person from among you.

Do not bring another Christian to court

1 When you have a complaint against a brother, how dare you bring it before pagan judges, instead of bringing it before God’s people? 2 Do you not know, that you shall one day judge the world? And if you are to judge the world, are you incapable of judging such simple problems?

3 Do you not know, that we will even judge the angels? And could you not decide everyday affairs? 4 But when you have ordinary cases to be judged, you bring them before those who are of no account in the Church! 5 Shame on you! Is there not even one among you wise enough to be the arbiter among believers?

6 But no. One of you brings a suit against another one, and files that suit before unbelievers. 7 It is already a failure that you have suits against each other. Why do you not rather suffer wrong and receive some damage? 8 But no. You wrong and injure others, and those are your brothers and sisters. 9 Do you not know that the wicked will not inherit the kingdom of God?

Make no mistake about it: those who lead sexually immoral lives, or worship idols, or who are adulterers, perverts, sodomites, 10 or thieves, exploiters, drunkards, slanderers or embezzlers will not inherit the kingdom of heaven. 11 Some of you were like that, but you have been cleansed, and consecrated to God and have been set right with God, by the name of the Lord Jesus, and the Spirit of our God.

Sexual immorality

12 Everything is lawful for me, but not everything is to my profit. Everything is lawful for me, but I will not become a slave of anything. 13 Food commissioned to condemn them, but to be witnesses to the light.

• 6:1 “We carry treasures (from God) in vessels of clay” (2 Cor 4:7). How far is our daily life from what we pretend it is: children of God reborn in the Spirit! What do the members of our own family think about this! What do our near neighbors think of us!

Paul points out the contradiction between the contempt of believers for the false “justice” of the world, and the fact of lawsuits among them. What should they do? Settle their differences in the way indicated by the Gospel (Mt 18:15), in so far as there is a real community. How beautiful it would be to follow the letter of the Gospel (Mt 5:40)!

is for the stomach, as the stomach is for food, and God will destroy them both. Yet the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord; and the Lord is for the body. And God, who raised the Lord, will also raise us with his power.

Do you not know that your bodies are members of Christ? And you would make that part of his body become a part of a prostitute? Never! But you well know that when you join yourselves to a prostitute, you become one with her. For Scripture says: The two will become one flesh. On the contrary, anyone united to the Lord becomes one spirit with him.

consience quoted the first part of this sentence to justify their immoral behavior.

Food is for the stomach…. the body is for the Lord (v. 13). Paul contrasts what is purely biological in our body with what makes up our whole person. To eat and drink are requirements of the stomach (modern language: body). In sexual union the body is given (modern language: person). This is why the believer who belong to Christ cannot give himself to a prostitute.

Paul finds himself with the same problem that had led him to intervene in 1 Thessalonians 4. For the Jews, all the criteria for morality were in the commandments of the law. It was not usually questioned to what degree these commandments were the expression of an eternal order or depended on the beliefs and the culture of past time. Whatever the law condemned—interpreted by the religious community—was a sin. Yet the Greeks and the pagans were ignorant of this law. Paul recalls the commandments on sexual matters (5:11 and 6:10; Eph 5:3), as Jesus had done (Mk 7:21), but he is careful not to make it the only criterion of what is good and bad. For him what obliges Christians to control and even strongly curb the practice of sexuality is their life in Christ. They want to respond to a call from God rather than satisfy the demands of nature.

Paul’s way of responding is of particular interest for us today in the universal moral crisis. For centuries and through necessity, sexuality was seen above all as the means of procreation; and from there began the search for the natural law ordering sex, pleasure and procreation. Today, union is no longer, primarily, for procreation even if procreation is desired. The cultural evolution and feminine promotion have made of sexual union, for an ever-increasing number of couples, the occasion of an exceptionally deep human exchange.

At the same time, personal liberation—and the liberation of women who carry all the weight of maternity—has thrown doubt on former moral laws, seen as belonging to a certain time and culture. Almost all countries that are considered “developed” have had to take into account pre-marital sex, homosexuality, abortion on the mother’s decision, the choice of maternity and even strong desires to prevent sexuality to procreation and only within marriage. Christians get in touch with these questions with religious references their contemporaries lack. Yet if they don’t have other motivation than a natural law valid for all, limiting sexuality to procreation and only within marriage, they will probably get bogged down in endless discussions that are scarcely convincing.

So they must do what Paul did. Without forgetting the laws in the Old Testament, recognized by the apostles and the tradition of the Church up to our day, it must be said that the sexual conduct of a Christian obeys, first of all, a logic of faith in Jesus Christ. It is less a matter of defining what is “good” or “evil” than showing where the practice and the experience of love and sexuality should lead us. To proclaim moral principles of sexuality, without first highlighting the eminent dignity of our humanity created in the likeness of God, and then consecrated to Christ by Baptism and conversion, is wanting to gather the fruits without having planted the tree.

7.1 In this chapter Paul begins to answer some of the questions put to him in writing by the Corinthians. The first are about marriage and chastity.
have his own wife and each woman her own husband. 3 Let the husband fulfill his duty of husband and likewise the wife. 4 The wife is not the owner of her own body: the husband is. Similarly, the husband is not the owner of his own body: the wife is.

5 Do not refuse each other, except by mutual consent, and only for a time, in order to dedicate yourselves to prayer, and then come together again, lest you fall into Satan’s trap by lack of self-control. 6 I approve of this abstention, but I do not order it. 7 I would like everyone to be like me, but each has from God a particular gift, some in one way, others differently.

8 To the unmarried and the widows I say that it would be good for them to remain as I am, 9 but if they cannot control themselves, let them marry, for it is better to marry than to burn with passion.

Marriage and divorce

10 I command married couples—not I, but the Lord—that the wife should not separate from her husband. 11 If she separates from him, let her not marry again, or let her make peace with her husband. Similarly the husband should not divorce his wife.

12 To the others I say—from me and not from the Lord—if a brother has a wife who is not a believer but she agrees to live with him, let him not separate from her. 13 In the same manner, if a woman has a husband

Christian life encouraged the esteem for chastity. That esteem could be inspired as well by other non-Christian motives. Many doctrines in the Greek world considered evil and unclean whatever came from the body; and so, for some Christians, perfection meant living like angels, condemning among other things, marriage.

Paul does not teach everything on marriage, but only clarifies the relation between chastity and marriage. Spouses belong to Christ with all their being, consecrated by Baptism. Therefore they cannot become slaves to the demands of their bodies. Love rather than sex guides them.

To avoid immorality (v. 2). Paul says precisely: Because of “porneia” let each one take… This “porneia” has many meanings: prostitution, illegitimate unions, and many other things that go along with the word “porno.” Paul is probably referring to sexual attraction, a force that rebels against our moral projects (similar to the revolt of the flesh in Rom 7:21). He does not say a person should marry “in order to” avoid misconduct but “because” sex is a reality strong enough to impose its demands.

Many are shocked by Paul not speaking of the positive aspect of sexuality at the service of love, but we must not forget that twenty centuries are between him and us. In Paul’s time the Greeks considered the sharing of themselves to be an ideal: a spouse for children, a friend for love, and prostitutes for pleasure. Here, on the contrary, Paul presents sexual life as a commitment of the whole human person (6:13) and not the “work of the flesh”: something that is very important.

Christianity was to reveal the dignity of marriage and conjugal love; but only in the twelfth century in Christian countries would there be an awareness of the great beauty of a couple’s love. What is here revolutionary is the reminder of the equality of rights of husband and wife according to the teaching of Jesus (Mt 10:1-12).

Lest you fall into Satan’s trap (v. 5). We should recall these words when speaking about Christian birth control. Paul says that, except in special cases where a special grace is given, it is not good for husband and wife to abstain from intimate relations for a long time.

10. I command married couples (v. 10). We read after a while: To the others I say (v. 12), referring again to married persons. It is almost obvious that in verse 10 Paul addresses married couples recognized by the Church; and in verse 12, all those married before they were baptized, but whose partners do not yet belong to the Church.

If she separates… (v. 11). Paul stresses a teaching of Jesus (Mt 5:32 and 19:5). This fundamental law of marriage as a commitment lasting to death is a divine law: not I but the Lord (v. 10). See also Ephesians 5:22.

If the unbelieving… (v. 15). Paul makes an exception for those who at the time of their conversion and Baptism were married. In this one case the new Christian, starting a new life, obtains freedom from the marriage ties if his or her partner does not want to accept his (or her) conversion. Even while praising the desire of the believer to convert his spouse, Paul’s advice is that sometimes it would be better to separate, notwithstanding the possibility of a new marriage in the new faith. It is important to remember that Paul was living in a pagan world where separation and divorce were legal and constantly practiced.
who is not a believer but he agrees to live with her, let her not separate from her husband. 14 Because the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband who believes. Otherwise, your children also would be apart from God; but as it is, they are consecrated to God.

Now, if the unbelieving husband or wife wants to separate, let them do so. In this case, the Christian partner is not bound, for the Lord has called us to peace. 16 Besides, are you sure, wife, that you could save your husband, and you, husband, that you could save your wife?

17 Except for this, let each one continue living as he was when God called him, as was his lot set by the Lord. This is what I order in all churches. 18 Let the circumcised Jew not remove the marks of the circumcision when he is called by God, and let the non-Jew not be circumcised when he is called. 19 For the important thing is not, to be circumcised or not, but to keep the commandments of God.

20 Let each of you, therefore, remain in the state in which you were called by God. 21 If you were a slave when called, do not worry, yet if you can gain your freedom, take the opportunity.

22 The slave called to believe in the Lord is a freed person belonging to the Lord just as whoever has been called while free, becomes a slave of Christ. 23 You have been bought at a very great price; do not become slaves of a human being.

24 So then, brothers and sisters, continue living in the state you were before God, at the time of his call.

Marriage and virginity

25 With regard to those who remain virgins, I have no special commandment from the Lord, but I give some advice, hoping that I am worthy of trust by the mercy of the Lord.

26 I think this is good in these hard times in which we live. It is good for someone to remain as he is.

27 If you who is not a believer but he agrees to live with her, let her not separate from her husband. 14 Because the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband who believes. Otherwise, your children also would be apart from God; but as it is, they are consecrated to God.

Your children also would be apart from God (v. 14), Paul says precisely: “your children would be unclean”, using this word with the meaning that Jesus gave it: children who do not yet share the privileges of God’s people. Would it be right to think that children of Christian parents are alien to God as long as they have not been baptized? Grace has already touched them through the tenderness, the care and the prayers of their parents. We must not use false arguments when we invite Christian parents, (and rightly so) not to delay the Baptism of their children.

are married, do not try to divorce your wife; if you are not married, do not marry. If he marries does not sin, nor does the young girl who marries. Yet they will face disturbing experiences, and I would like to spare you. If anyone realizes he will not be behaving correctly with his fiancée because of the ardor of his passion, and that things should take their due course, let him marry; he commits no sin. But if another, of firmer heart, thinks that he can control his passion and decides not to marry so that his fiancée may remain a virgin, he does better. So then, he who marries does well, and he who does not marry does better.

The wife is bound as long as her husband lives. If he dies, she is free to be married to whomsoever she wishes, provided that she does so in the Christian way. However, she will be happier if, following my advice, she remains as she is, and I believe that I also have the Spirit of God.

Can we share in pagan customs?

1 Regarding meat from the offerings to idols, we know that all of us have knowledge, but knowledge puffs up, while love builds. If anyone

Paul’s response goes further than the question of the Corinthians when he adds: time is running out. He points to much more than a prompt return of Christ, familiar to the first Christians. The coming of Jesus has shortened time in a figurative way: we can no longer settle down in the present world as we did before when we could see no further than the present. We are entirely turned towards what is to come. A Christian lives in the present, but all that matters most for him comes in the “after.” Let us not argue with Paul as if he were reasoning on the consequences of the certain coming of Jesus Christ; he is not theologizing but speaks like someone already possessed by Christ.

Paul then points out that all Christian commitments are likely to cause division for those who wish to live according to the logic of their Baptism, seen as a total consecration to Christ. Married life or family life can present many obstacles to spiritual freedom and apostolic desires: see the words of Jesus in Mark 10:29.

If anyone realizes he will not be behaving correctly with his fiancée because of the ardor of his passion, and that things should take their due course, let him marry; he commits no sin. But if another, of firmer heart, thinks that he can control his passion and decides not to marry so that his fiancée may remain a virgin, he does better. So then, he who marries does well, and he who does not marry does better.

Can we share in pagan customs?

1 Regarding meat from the offerings to idols, we know that all of us have knowledge, but knowledge puffs up, while love builds. If anyone thinks that he has knowledge, he does not yet know as he should know, \(^3\) but if someone loves (God), he has been known (by God).

\(^4\) Can we, then, eat meat from offerings to the idols? We know that an idol is without existence and that there is no God but one. \(^5\) People speak indeed of other gods in heaven and on earth and, in this sense, there are many gods and lords. \(^6\) Yet for us, there is but one God, the Father, from whom everything comes, and to whom we go. And there is one Lord, Christ Jesus, through whom everything exists, and through him, we exist.

\(^7\) Not everyone, however, has that knowledge. For some persons, who, until recently, took the idols seriously, that food remains linked to the idol, and eating of it stains their conscience, which is unformed.

\(^8\) It is not food that brings us closer to God. If we eat, we gain nothing, and if we do not eat, we do not lose anything. \(^9\) We are free, of course, but let not your freedom cause others, who are less prepared, to fall. \(^10\) What if others with an unformed conscience see you, a person of knowledge, sitting at the table in the temple of idols? Will not their weak conscience, because of your example, move them to eat also? \(^11\) Then, with your knowledge, you would have caused your weak brother or sister to perish, the one for whom Christ died. \(^12\) When you disturb the weak conscience of your brother or sister, and sin against them, you sin against Christ himself. \(^13\) Therefore, if any food will bring my brother to sin, I shall never eat this food, lest my brother or sister fall.

Renouncing one’s own rights: the example of Paul

\(^9\) As for me, am I not free? I am an apostle and I have seen Jesus, probably added later. Here, Paul contrasts the knowledge of God we can acquire and express by means of words and ideas, and another more authentic riches that is God’s presence to the one he knows and treats in a special way.

In verses 10-12, Paul speaks of those of weak or unformed conscience, meaning the believers who have not yet had sufficient religious instruction or who have been badly instructed. They think that something is sinful when in reality it is not; or they are weak and follow others when their conscience reproaches them. In 10:14-22 Paul will clearly state that a Christian may not participate in such a banquet in the temple. In this passage he does not say it openly, but he shows that such an attitude should be shocking for many people.

- \(^9.1\) Have we not the right to be fed? (v. 4). In asking the Corinthians to forget their right the Lord, and you are my work in the Lord. 2 Although I may not be an apostle for others, at least I am one for you. You are, in the Lord, evidence of my apostleship.

3 Now, this is what I answer to those who criticize me: 4 Have we not the right to be fed? 5 Have we not the right, to bring along with us a sister, as do the other apostles, and the brothers of the Lord, and Cephas? 6 Am I the only one, with Barnabas, bound to work?

What soldier goes to war at his own expense? 7 What farmer does not eat from the vineyard he planted? Who tends a flock, and does not drink from its milk? 8 Are these rights only accepted human practice? No. The law says the same. In the law of Moses it is written: Do not muzzle the ox which threshes grain. 9 Does this mean that God is concerned with oxen, 10 or, rather, with us? Of course, it applies to us. For our sake it was written, that no one plows without expecting a reward for plowing, and no one threshes, without hoping for a share of the crop. 11 Then, if we have sown spiritual riches among you, would it be too much for us to reap some material reward? 12 If others have had a share among you, we could have it all the more.

Yet, we made no use of this right, and we prefer to endure everything, rather than put any obstacle to the gospel of Christ. 13 Do you not know, to eat sacrificed meat, Paul gives himself as an example and tells them how he also renounces his right to be supported by the churches. The churches gave food and drink to the apostles who visited them and took care of the Christian women attending them (v. 5), as in the case of Jesus (Lk 8:2). However, to give proof of detachment, Paul did not accept this favor and lived by the work of his hands (Acts 18:3).

I am bound to do it. Woe to me if I do not preach the Gospel (v. 16). As happened with Jeremiah (Jer 1) Christ the Lord began ruling the life of Paul from the day he called him.

I made myself all things to all people (v. 22). Paul gives a guideline for apostles of all times. Apostolic movements require their members to know their environment very well and the problems of their companions. Committed Christians must share the life-style and human aspirations of their companions in everything that is not sinful. Becoming like Paul, "a Greek among the Greeks," not in appearance but in reality, they will be able to express simply and in all truth their faith in Christ; in that way they will offer to those whose daily life they share, the possibility of one day finding their place in the Church. From then on it will be the entire life of the new convert with all that is linked to his culture and his milieu that will be renewed by faith.
do, for the gospel, so that I, too, have a share of it.

Faith demands sacrifice

• 24 Have you not learned anything from the stadium? Many run, but only one gets the prize. Run, therefore, intending to win it, 25 as athletes, who impose upon themselves a rigorous discipline. Yet, for them the wreath is of laurels which wither, while for us, it does not wither.

26 So, then, I run, knowing where I go. I box, but not aimlessly in the air. 27 I punish my body and control it, lest, after preaching to others, I myself should be rejected.

10 • 1 Let me remind you, brothers and sisters, about our ancestors. All of them were under the cloud and all crossed the sea. 2 All underwent the baptism of the land and of the sea to join Moses; 3 and all of them ate from the same spiritual manna; 4 and all of them drank from the same spiritual drink. For you know, that they drank from a spiritual rock following them, and the rock was Christ. 5 However, most of them did not please God, and the desert was strewn with their bodies.

6 All of this happened as an example for us, so that we might not become people of evil desires, as they did.

7 Do not follow idols, as some of them did, and Scripture says: The people sat down to eat and drink and stood up for orgy. 8 Let us not fall into sexual immorality, as some of them did, and in one day, twenty-three thousand of them fell dead. 9 And let us not tempt the Lord, as some of them did, and were killed by serpents; 10 nor grumble, as some of them did, and were cut down by the destroying angel.

11 These things happened to them, as an example, and they were written as a warning, for us, as the last times come upon us. 12 Therefore, if you think you stand, beware, lest you fall. 13 No trial greater than human endurance has overcome you. God is faithful and will not let you be tempted beyond your strength. He will give you, together with the temptation, the strength to escape and to resist.

14 Therefore, dear friends, shun the cult of idols.

• 15 I address you as intelligent persons; judge what I say. 16 The cup of blessing that we bless, is it not a communion with the blood of Christ? And the bread that we break, is it not a communion with the body of Christ?

17 The bread is one, and so we, though many, form one body, sharing the one bread.

18 Consider the Israelites. For them, to eat of the victim is to come into communion with its altar.

24. Paul is now ready to tell the Corinthians that they may not share the cult of idols. To justify his position (for the Corinthians it was very strict), Paul presents two arguments:

– no racing contest is won without self-sacrifice;

– Scripture has many examples of how God punished those who practiced a cult of idols.

As athletes who impose upon themselves a rigorous discipline (v. 25). Like them, we must renounce many things that are not evil. We need discipline to be really free, whether in the use of alcohol or tobacco, or not idly waste time in front of the television or reading magazines. While the world lures us to be spectators and consumers, we must be agents of salvation, the salt of the earth. The second paragraph recalls the example of Israel (see Ex 32 and Num 21).

10.1 The rock was Christ (v. 4). The Jewish legends said that the rock mentioned in Exodus 17:5 followed the Israelites in their journey. Paul does not affirm that legend as true. He only recalls it as an image of Christ, present in his Church.

15. And the bread that we break, is it not a communion with the body of Christ? (v. 16). Paul will return to speak of the Eucharist in 11:18. This communion through the body
What does all that mean? That the meat is really consecrated to the idol, or that the idol is a being. However, when the pagans offer a sacrifice, the sacrifice goes to the demons, not to God. I do not want you to come into fellowship with demons. You cannot drink, at the same time, from the cup of the Lord and from the cup of demons. You cannot share in the table of the Lord and in the table of the demons. Do we want, perhaps, to provoke the jealousy of the Lord? Could we be stronger than he?

Practical solutions

• 23 Everything is lawful for me, but not everything is to my profit. Everything is lawful for me, but not everything builds up: let no one pursue his own interests, but the interests of the other.

25 Eat, then, whatever is sold at the market, and do not raise questions of conscience about it. Because: the earth and whatever is on it belongs to the Lord. If someone who does not share your faith invites you, go and eat of anything served to you, without problems of conscience. However, if somebody tells you that the meat is from the offerings to idols, then do not eat, out of consideration for those warning you, and for the sake of their conscience.

29 I say: “In consideration of their conscience,” not of yours, for is it convenient, that my rights be misinterpreted by them and their conscience? Is it good that I bring on me criticism, for some good thing I am sharing, and for which I will give thanks?

Then, whether you eat, or drink, or whatever you do, do it for the glory of God. Give no offense to the Jews, or to the Greeks, or to the Church of God, just as I try to please everyone in everything. I do not seek my own interest, but that of many, this is: that they be saved.

• 1 Follow my example as I follow the example of Christ. I praise you, because you remember me in everything, and you keep the traditions that I have given you. However, I wish to remind you, that every man has Christ as his head, while the wife has her husband as her head; and and blood of the Risen Christ, besides being a personal encounter with Christ, makes of all of us one body. We form one body. This does not only mean that we feel united, but that the Risen Christ unites us to himself and, so doing, gives the community new strength.

The idol is nothing. The idol in itself was just a material thing, like an image. Yet the Jews thought (and Paul also mentions it) that the cult of idols was addressed to the devils. In fact, when people are now being dragged along by crazy trends or rhythms, or attitudes, and sacrifice to their idols what their families need for survival, and make themselves dependent on “mortals,” we know that in reality they are serving the devil.

• 23. Everything is lawful for me, but not everything is to my profit (v. 23). Paul draws the same practical deductions as in 8:1-13. Except in the cases mentioned, where the believer refuses to share directly in something evil, the supreme rule of conduct will be to seek what is good and respect the conscience of others.

29 I say: “In consideration of their conscience,” not of yours, for is it convenient, that my rights be misinterpreted by them and their conscience? Is it good that I bring on me criticism, for some good thing I am sharing, and for which I will give thanks?

Women’s dress and Mediterranean customs

• 1 Follow my example as I follow the example of Christ. I praise you, because you remember me in everything, and you keep the traditions that I have given you. However, I wish to remind you, that every man has Christ as his head, while the wife has her husband as her head; and God is the head of Christ. 4 If a man prays or prophesies with his head covered, he dishonors his head. 5 On the contrary, the woman who prays or prophesies with her head uncovered, does not respect her head. She might as well cut her hair. 6 If a woman does not use a veil, let her cut her hair; and if it is a shame for a woman to have her hair cut or shaved, then let her use a veil.

7 Men do not need to cover their heads, for they are the image of God and reflect his glory, while a woman reflects the glory of man. 8 Man was not formed from woman, but woman from man. 9 Nor did God create man for woman, but woman for man. 10 Therefore, a woman must respect the angels, and have on her head the sign of her dependence.

11 Anyway, the Christian attitude does not separate man from woman, and woman from man, 12 and if God has created woman from man, man is born from woman and both come from God.

13 Judge for yourselves: is it proper for a woman to pray without a veil? 14 Common sense teaches us that it is shameful for a man to wear long hair, 15 while long hair is the pride of a woman, and it has been given to her precisely as a veil.

16 If some of you want to argue, let it be known that it is not our custom nor the custom in the churches of God.

The Lord’s Supper

• 17 To continue with my advice, I cannot praise you, for your gatherings are not for the better but for the worse.

18 First, as I have heard, when you gather together, there are divisions among you and I partly believe it.

worship (Mt 18:10 and Rev 5:8; 8:3), even our exterior bearing is in a way an active sharing in the liturgy of the Eucharist.

This paragraph helps us to understand that many things in the Church and in Christian life are no more than customs or human traditions, although they maintain among us respectable values. Those in authority, like Paul, cannot impose them on the community.

17. Without making any transition Paul passes to the most important act of the Christian assembly, the Eucharist. These lines are the oldest testimony relating to the Supper of the Lord and were written in the year 55 A.D., some years ahead of the Gospels.

The community gathered in a friendly house. After the supper, solemnized by the singing of the psalms, the leader of the community said a prayer of thanksgiving, remembering the last supper of Jesus, and repeated his words to consecrate the body and blood of Christ. Then everyone received communion from the same bread and the same cup.

In 10:16 Paul recalled two aspects of the Lord’s Supper:

- it is the communion of the body and blood of the Lord;
- it affirms a union of love among all: we form one body.

Here Paul denounces the Corinthians for their sin with regard to these two points.

Each one eats at once his own food (v. 21) to avoid sharing with those who are poorer, or to evade the company of certain persons. We can imagine that the groups spontaneously formed and occupied various rooms in the same house: actually each one joined the group from his own milieu. Perhaps the buffet is more promising where the rich are, while the poor are in the yard.

Another is getting drunk and therefore not disposed to receive the body of Christ.

In not recognizing the Body (v. 29). This term points out at the same time:

- the one who does not distinguish consecrated bread from ordinary bread and does not receive it with due respect, as the body of Christ;
- the one who ignores his brothers and sisters in the celebration of the Eucharist. He does not recognize the body of Christ as formed by all the assembled Christians.

The Eucharist is the center and heart of the life of the Church, which is, before all else, a communion with God and with others. The Church is not only an instrument for spreading the Good News, but the place here on earth where people can already experience the union between themselves and Christ.

You are proclaiming the death of the Lord until he comes (v. 26). All the Eucharists celebrated around the world each day and every minute of the day, remind us that the death of Christ fills up the time until his coming.
There may have to be different groups among you, so that it becomes clear who among you are genuine.

Your gatherings are no longer the Supper of the Lord, for each one eats at once, his own food, and, while one is hungry, the other is getting drunk.

Do you not have houses in which to eat and drink? Or perhaps you despise the Church of God and desire to humiliate those who have nothing? What shall I say? Shall I praise you? For this I cannot praise you.

This is the tradition of the Lord that I received, and, that, in my turn, I have handed on to you; the Lord Jesus, on the night that he was delivered up, took bread and, after giving thanks, broke it, saying, “This is my body which is broken for you; do this in memory of me.” In the same manner, taking the cup after the supper, he said, “This cup is the new Covenant, in my blood. Whenever you drink it, do it in memory of me.”

So, then, whenever you eat of this bread and drink from this cup, you are proclaiming the death of the Lord, until he comes.

Therefore, if anyone eats of the bread or drinks from the cup of the Lord unworthily, he sins against the body and blood of the Lord.

Let each one, then, examine himself before eating of the bread and drinking from the cup. Otherwise, he eats and drinks his own condemnation, in not recognizing the Body.

This is the reason why, so many among you are sick and weak, and several have died. But if we examine ourselves, we will not be examined by God, and judged in this way.

The Lord’s strokes are to correct us, so that we may not be condemned with this world.

So then, brothers, when you gather for a meal, wait for one another and, if someone is hungry, let him eat in his own house. In this way, you will not gather for your common condemnation. The other instructions I shall give, when I go there.

Spiritual gifts and harmony

With respect to spiritual gifts, I will remind you of the following: When you were still pagans, you were irresistibly drawn to your dumb idols. I tell you that nobody inspired by the Spirit of God may say, “A curse on Jesus,” as no one can say, “Jesus is the Lord,” except by the Holy Spirit.

There is diversity of gifts, but the Spirit is the same. There is diversity of ministries, but the Lord is the same.

History cannot cease, nor civilization be stagnant as happened in past centuries. Not only does technical progress force us to advance, but also the requirements of justice springing from the death of the innocent (and here God is the innocent) destroy the established order. Jesus’ death does not allow the world to rest or have peace. The Church reminds us of the death of Christ, not to preserve the past, but to draw from this unique event new energy for both reconciling and condemning.

This is the reason why so many among you are sick (v. 30). The Lord uses many signs to admonish us. Sometimes through personal illness; more often, through the weakness and spiritual anemia of the Church. Fulfilling the requirements for a worthy celebration of the Eucharist would be sufficient to renew the Church.

Let us notice the order followed by Paul: the Spirit comes after the Word, the Son. The spiritual gifts distributed in our days are the fruit of the death and Resurrection of Jesus.

In the Church of Corinth the Holy Spirit reveals his presence by giving many believers spiritual gifts. All marvelous when some of them, touched by the Spirit, begin praising God with words understood by no one. They feel still more the presence of God when a prophet reveals to some of them what is on their conscience or gives to someone a special message from God.

Paul intervenes to establish order. Pagans went wild in the frenzied celebration of their feasts, while the Spirit makes everyone more responsible. When a frenzied individual cried out something senseless or scandalous, it was proof that he was not inspired.
6 There is diversity of works, but the same God works in all.

7 The Spirit reveals his presence in each one with a gift that is also a service. 8 One is to speak with wisdom, through the Spirit. Another teaches, according to the same Spirit. 9 To another is given faith, in which the Spirit acts; to another, the gift of healing, and it is the same Spirit. 10 Another works miracles, another is a prophet, another recognizes what comes from the good or evil spirit; another speaks in tongues, and still another interprets what has been said in tongues. 11 And all of this, is the work of the one and only Spirit, who gives to each one, as he so desires.

Comparison with the body

- 12 As the body is one, having many members, and all the members, while being many, form one body, so it is with Christ. 13 All of us, whether Jews or Greeks, slaves or free, have been baptized in one Spirit, to form one body, and all of us have been given, to drink from the one Spirit.

14 The body has not just one member, but many. 15 If the foot should say, “I do not belong to the body for I am not a hand,” it would be wrong; it is part of the body! 16 Even though the ear says, “I do not belong to the body for I am not an eye,” it is part of the body. 17 If all the body were eye, how would we hear? And if all the body were ear, how would we smell?

18 God has arranged all the members, placing each part of the body as he pleased. 19 If all were the same part where would the body be? 20 But there are many members and one body. 21 The eye cannot tell the hand, “I do not need you,” nor the head tell the feet, “I do not need you.”
22 Still more, the parts of our body that we most need are those that seem to be the weakest; 23 the parts that we consider lower are treated with much care, 24 and we cover them with more modesty because they are less presentable, whereas the others do not need such attention. 25 God, himself, arranged the body in this way, giving more honor to those parts that need it, so that the body may not be divided, but, rather, each member may care for the others. 26 When one suffers, all of them suffer, and when one receives honor, all rejoice together.

27 Now, you are the body of Christ, and each of you, individually, is a member of it. 28 So God has appointed us in the Church. First apostles, second prophets, third teachers. Then come miracles, then the gift of healing, material help, administration in the Church and the gift of tongues.

29 Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers? Can all perform miracles, 30 or cure the sick, or speak in tongues, or explain what was said in tongues? 31 Be that as it may, set your hearts on the most precious gifts, and I will show you a much better way.

No gift higher than love

13 • If I could speak all the human and angelic tongues, but had no love, I would only be sounding brass or a clanging cymbal. 2 If I had the gift of prophecy, knowing secret things, with all kinds of knowledge, and had faith great enough to remove mountains, but had no love, I would be nothing. 3 If I gave everything I had to the poor, and even give up my body to be burned, if I am without love, it would be of no value to me.

4 Love is patient, kind, without envy.

pay attention to the riches of our brothers and sisters and awaken in them the consciousness of their dignity and responsibility, we shall see a new resurgence in the Church, fruit of the Spirit. It would take too long to recall the harm done to the Church in some places because of the passivity of Christians in a clericalized church.

At the end of the paragraph Paul lists the various gifts according to their importance. First, not what appears more miraculous, but what is most constructive for the Church. That is why apostles occupy the first place. These are not only the Twelve chosen by Jesus, but also those who, like them and accepted by them, are founding new communities and governing those already existing. Then, in second place, come the prophets, who not only announce words of God, but also strengthen the community with the gifts of faith and wisdom that inspire their preaching.

In the last place are those who receive the gift of speaking in tongues, although in Corinth it was as if they had already reached Heaven.

• 13.1 I will show you a much better way (12:31). As the Corinthians marveled at the spectacular and wonderful things worked by the Spirit, Paul tells them that the only important thing is the ability to love.

Love or charity? At the beginning both words meant the same thing. Later on, the word “charity” came to mean the help given in the form of alms, although the giving of alms alone is not real love. On the other hand, for many people, true love is only that of a man and a woman. So it is irrelevant whether we say charity or love, but we have rather to clarify what love really is. Paul does just that in the present text.

If I could speak... if I had... (vv. 1-2). To love is more important than performing miracles, more important than doing great things for others and dying for a cause, all of which can be done without love.

When I was a child (v. 11). Already Paul outlines what he will explain in Chapter 15 when he speaks of our life after the Resurrection. Just as the caterpillar must completely change itself to become a butterfly (not merely by sprouting wings), and just as a child’s game has no sense for an adult, so will it be for our present life: work, study, love, our understanding of God and the world, the life of the Church—all will be no more than a forgotten past. Paul experienced a love of God that invaded him and divinized his least desires, and he knew it was already God’s possession of him, which would be eternal: love would never end.

Faith, hope, and love (v. 13). Paul quite often joins these three “virtues,” that is the three movements in the Christian soul. In no other place does he state this more clearly than here. There is no authentic love without faith and hope.

The greatest of these is love. Sometimes this sentence is used to misrepresent what is essential
It is not boastful or arrogant. It is not ill-mannered, nor does it seek its own interest. Love overcomes anger and forgets offenses. It does not take delight in wrong, but rejoices in truth. Love excuses everything, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things.

Love will never end. Prophecies may cease, tongues be silent and knowledge disappear. For knowledge grasps something of the truth and prophecy as well. And when what is perfect comes, everything imperfect will pass away. When I was a child, I thought and reasoned like a child, but when I grew up, I gave up childish ways. Likewise, at present, we see dimly, as in a mirror, but, then, it shall be face to face. Now, we know, in part, but then I will know as I am known. Now, we have faith, hope and love, these three, but the greatest of these is love.

to Christian life. For many say, “I do good to my neighbor, what else does God ask of me?” It would not be difficult to prove that such love is very limited, selfish and impure. It is a “love” in which divine love lives in very cramped conditions and so is unable to transform our life. We would need, first of all, great hope in a Christian sense that is a passion for eternal things and then the yielding of ourselves to the Spirit who would complete his work of love in us. Love reaches its perfection when we are in God: I will know him as he knows me. As long as we do not see God, love is immature; this is the time when love must grow through faith and the knowledge of God’s word; also through hope and perseverance as we follow Jesus poor, free and in the midst of trials.

14.1 It seems that the assemblies in Corinth were very disorderly. People did not wait for their turn to speak, but spoke at the same time, especially the women. Paul invites them to be silent. Those with spectacular gifts felt more important and did not respect the most elementary order. Some who pretended to be inspired spoke and acted very strangely and at times shamefully.

Paul establishes an order of priority, giving preference to those gifts that most help strengthen the Church. He compares the Church to a building. We build it when we help others to grow, to be better and more united. What makes a person better is charity, and not the performance of extraordinary gifts and charisms, as miracles, languages and such. This is why extraordinary performances do not mean holiness; God can use anybody, even sinners, to perform for others' benefit. The truth of a religion does not rely on the fact that its preachers can heal the sick or do similar things, thereby filling stadiums and impressing large audiences. It depends on its fidelity to the teaching of the apostles, as found in the Church.

The spirits speaking through prophets are submitted to prophets (v. 32). What comes from the Spirit always blends with what comes from the Spirit. The prophet, instead, addresses all people, to give them strength, encouragement and consolation. He who speaks in tongues strengthens himself, but the prophet builds the Church.

Would that, all of you spoke in tongues! But, better still, if you were all prophets. The prophet has an advantage over the one speaking in tongues, unless someone explains what was spoken, so that the community may profit. Suppose, brothers and sisters, I go to you and I speak in tongues, of what use will it be to you, if I do not bring you some revelation, knowledge, prophecy or teaching?

7 When someone plays the flute, or harp, or any musical instrument, if there are no tunes and notes, who will recognize the tune? 8 And if the bugle call is not clear, who will get ready for battle? 9 The same, with you. If your words are not understood, who will know what is said? You will be talking to the moon! 10 There are many languages in the world, and each of them has meaning, 11 but if I cannot find any meaning in what is said, I become a foreigner to the speaker, and the speaker to me.

12 As you set your heart on spiritual gifts, be eager to build the Church, and you will receive abundantly. 13 Because of this, those who speak in tongues should ask God for the ability to explain what they say.

14 When I am praying in tongues, my spirit prays, but my mind remains idle. 15 What shall I do, then? I will pray with the spirit and I will pray with my mind. I will sing with the spirit and I will sing with the mind. 16 If you praise God only with your spirit, how will the ordinary person add the “Amen” to your thanksgiving, since the outsider has not understood what you said? 17 Your thanksgiving was indeed beautiful, but it was useless for others.

18 I give thanks to God because I speak in tongues more than all of you, 19 but when I am in the assembly, I prefer to say five words from my mind, which may teach others, than ten thousand words in tongues.

20 Brothers and sisters, do not remain as children in your thinking. Be like infants in doing evil, but mature in your thinking. 21 God says in the law: I will speak to this people through those talking other tongues and through lips of foreigners, but even so they will not listen to me. 22 So, speaking in tongues is significant for those who refuse to believe, not for those who believe, while prophecy is a sign for those who believe, not for those who refuse to believe.

23 Yet, imagine, that the whole Church is gathered together, and all speak in tongues when unbelievers and uninformed people enter. What will they think? That you are crazy. 24 Instead, suppose that each of you speaks as a prophet; as soon as an unbeliever or an uninformed person enters, all of you call him to account and disclose his most secret thinking. 25 Then, falling on his face, he would be urged to worship God and declare that God is truly among you.

26 What then shall we conclude, brothers? When you gather, each of you can take part with a song, a teaching, or a revelation, by speaking in tongues or interpreting what has been said in tongues. But let all this build up the Church.

27 Are you going to speak in tongues? Let two or three, at most, speak, each in turn, and let one interpret what has been said. 28 If there is no interpreter, hold your tongue in the assembly and speak to God by yourself.

29 As for the prophets, let two or three speak, with the others commenting on what has been said. 30 If a revelation comes to one of those sitting by, let the first be silent. 31 Even all of you could prophesy, one by one, for the instruction and encouragement of all. 32 The spirits, speaking through prophets, are submitted to prophets, 33 because God is not a God of confusion, but of peace.

34 (Let women be silent in the assemblies, as in all the churches of the saints. They are not allowed to speak. Let them be submissive, as the law commands. 35 If there is anything they desire to know, let them consult their husbands at home. For it is shameful for a woman to speak in Church.)

36 Did the word of God, perhaps, come from you? Or did it come only to you? 37 Anyone among you who claims to be a prophet or a spiritual person, should acknowledge that what I am writing to you is the Lord’s command. 38 If he does not recognize that, God will not recognize him.

39 So, my friends, set your hearts on the gift of prophecy, and do not forbid speaking in tongues. 40 However, everything should be done in a fitting and orderly way.

Resurrection is a fact

15 • 1 Let me remind you, brothers and sisters, of the Good News that I preached to you, and which you received, and on which, you stand firm. 2 By that gospel, you are saved, provided that you hold to it, as I preached it. Otherwise, you will have believed in vain.

3 In the first place, I have passed on to you what I, myself, received: that Christ died for our sins, as Scripture says; 4 that he was buried; that he was raised on the third day, according to the Scriptures; 5 that he appeared to Cephas and then to the Twelve. 6 Afterward, he appeared to more than five hundred brothers and sisters together; most of them are still alive, although some have already gone to rest. 7 Then he appeared to James, and after that, to all the apostles. 8 And last of all, he appeared to the most despicable of them, this is, to me. 9 For I am the last of the apostles, and I do not even deserve to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the Church of God. 10 Nevertheless, by the grace of God, I am what I am, and his grace toward me has not been without fruit. Far from it, I have toiled more than all of them, although, not I, rather the grace of God, in me.

11 Now, whether it was I or they, this, we preach, and this, you have believed. 12 Well, then, if Christ is preached as risen from the dead, 15.1 Have we here the response to a last question of the Corinthians? Many Greeks thought that at death the immortal soul leaves the body and remains alone. Was it admitted to the paradise of souls? Did it come to the great reservoir of souls already gone or who were to return, forgetting all the past lived on earth? Others held (as do a good number of Christians today), that all ends with death: see 1 Thessalonians 5:13. Paul will therefore remind the Corinthians that faith in the Resurrection is at the heart of the Christian message.

I remind you of the Gospel. Here certainly we may speak of Good News, for death as something unknown is and always has been the great burden of human life (Sir 40:1).

I have passed on to you (v. 3). Paul will not recall a tale, or a “myth,” these stories full of wisdom that abounded with the Greeks. They bared an order in the world, a meaning of life, but were only stories. Today certain people speak of the Resurrection in the same way. They say: “It matters little what took place, the Gospels are not directly interested in what happened to Jesus, for them it was important that strange events would give courage to the disciples and the hope of another life.” Paul says precisely the contrary: the Resurrection of Jesus is a fact.

How can some of you say that there is no resurrection of the dead? (v. 12). Paul begins with the Resurrection of Jesus as a fact: and from that he then draws consequences: our own resurrection.

We hear it said at times, even among believers that the Resurrection of Jesus is not an historical fact. This is true in the sense that Resurrection escapes the historical dimension. We know and we believe it because there are witnesses, and in no other way does history proceed. Nevertheless there is a vast difference: history deals with testimonies on which we have some ideas: a war, a meeting between two people, an invention. On the contrary, for the Resurrection of Jesus, the witnesses can only speak of apparitions of Jesus or meetings with him. This experience led them to believe something much greater: Jesus had begun a life about which we have no idea, even sharing the power of God! We, then, in this very special case, shall believe not only what they saw but also what they believe, and that is in no way comparable with historical processes. But all the same, Jesus’ Resurrection and coming in glory is a fact (see commentary on Mk 16).
how can some of you say, that there is no resurrection of the dead? If there is no resurrection of the dead, then Christ has not been raised. And if Christ has not been raised, our preaching is empty, and our belief comes to nothing. And we become false witnesses of God, attesting that he raised Christ, whereas he could not raise him, if indeed, the dead are not raised. If the dead are not raised, neither has Christ been raised. And if Christ has not been raised, your faith gives you nothing, and you are still in sin. Also, those who fall asleep, in Christ, are lost. If it is only for this life, that we hope in Christ, we are the most unfortunate of all people.

Christ gave us the way

- But no, Christ has been raised from the dead, and he comes before all those who have fallen asleep. A human being brought death; a human being also brings resurrection of the dead. For, as in Adam all die, so, in Christ, all will be made alive. However, each one in his own time: first Christ, then Christ’s people, when he comes.

Then, the end will come, when Christ delivers the kingdom to God the Father, after having destroyed every rule, authority and power. For he must reign and put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy to be destroyed will be death. As Scripture says: God has subjected everything under his feet.

When we say that everything is put under his feet, we exclude, of course, the Father, who subjects everything to him. When the Father has subjected everything to him, the Son will place himself under the One who subjected everything to him. From then on, God will be all in all.

Tell me: what are these people doing, who are baptized on behalf of the dead? If the dead cannot be raised, why do they want to be baptized for the dead?

As for us, why do we constantly risk our life? For death is my daily companion. I say that, brothers and sisters, before you, who are my pride in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Was it for human interest that I fought in Ephesus like a lion tamer? If the dead are not raised, let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we shall die! Do not be deceived; bad theories corrupt good morals. Wake up, and do not sin, because some of you are outstandingly ignorant about God; I say this to your shame.

Then the end will come, when Christ delivers the kingdom to God the Father (v. 24). Here again, let us leave aside simplistic images. Let us remember that there is only one God. Here, the Son is the word of God made flesh who has taken on his shoulders the whole history of humankind. He who is eternally returning to the Father from whom he is born brings to the eternity of God all creation. There will not be a re-beginning of history. God will be all in all, we will receive God from God and we will have all, finally becoming ourselves. That, surely, surpasses all we could have imagined, but Paul adds: The last enemy to be destroyed will be death (v. 26). John will say the same in Revelation (21:4).

Why do they want to be baptized for the dead? (v. 29). Perhaps some of them were
The body after the Resurrection

- 35. How will the dead be raised? With what kind of body will they come? (v. 35). Here indeed is the question we often ask: we would like to imagine, to know what we shall then be. But how can a human being imagine, know, this new world which is even now being prepared: is it not like a child still enclosed in the universe of its mother's womb, and trying to imagine the world into which it will be projected?

All that Paul can do is to throw light on the mystery by using comparisons.

What you sow is not the body of the future plant (v. 37). Jesus spoke of the grain that is sown (Jn 12:24). With this example he destroyed those primitive ideas that some people still have nowadays: that angels will come to gather the dust of the dead, that corpses will come out of their tombs… In reality, our present body is the grain and the risen body, the spike or ear, will not be the recomposition of the actual body that is put in the earth.

Not all flesh is the same (v. 39). Paul explains that one and the same word can express many different things that have some likeness. For example, the word “light” is used to designate the very different ways in which the sun, the moon and stars, each shines with its own special color. During Paul's time the word “body” was used for many things, even to designate the sun and the stars, called “heavenly bodies.” So, when it is said that the dead are raised with their own body, this does not mean with the same shape (with arms and legs and hair…) or the same life, although it will be the same person.

Just as the ear of wheat comes from a grain of wheat, it will be the same person as before, marked by all that has made him grow (the risen Christ rightly wished to show the marks of his passion on his glorious body). Since no one becomes himself alone, but in union and in relation with others, we shall know in all the fullness of their transfigured persons, those who have helped us most to develop our riches.

For there shall be a spiritual body as there is at present a living body (v. 44). Resurrection comes from what is within, it is like a transfiguration. Each one will have the body he/she deserves; a body that best expresses what he/she has become and what he/she is in God. Could we hope for anything more beautiful than that hope which is beautiful even in its logic? But is it certain? Paul is affirmative with all the boldness of faith. No reasoning can prove faith: only the experience of the working of the Spirit which even now is transfiguring us and will give us day by day, more than an intuition, a certitude of where we are going.

Earthly… heavenly… (v. 45-49). We all have a double heritage: by nature we are in solidarity with the human race in the person of Adam—man, animal and earthly—but we also belong to this human community which mysteriously forms itself around Christ who is Spirit, source of life and who comes from heaven. Baptism has not so with the heavenly. 49 This is why, after bearing the image of the earthly one, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly one.

The day of Resurrection

50 This I say, brothers: Flesh and blood cannot share the kingdom of God; nothing of us that is to decay, can reach imperishable life. 51 So, I want to teach you this mystery: although not all of us will die, all of us have to be transformed, in an instant, at the sound of the trumpet. You have heard of the last trumpet; then, in the twinkling of an eye, the dead will be raised, imperishable, while we shall be transformed. 52 For it is necessary that our mortal and perishable being put on the life that knows neither death nor decay.

53 When our perishable being puts on imperishable life, when our mortal being puts on immortality, the word of Scripture will be fulfilled: Death has been swallowed up by victory.

54 Death, where is your victory? Death, where is your sting?

55 Sin is the sting of death, to kill, and the law is what gives force to sin.

56 But give thanks to God, who gives us the victory, through Christ Jesus, our Lord.

58 So then, my dear brothers and sisters, be steadfast, and do not be moved. Improve constantly, in the work of the Lord, knowing that, with him, your labor is not without fruit.

Commendations and greetings

16 • 1 With regard to the collection in favor of the saints, follow the rules that I gave to the churches of Galatia. 2 On the first day of the week, let each of you put aside what you are able to spare, so that no collection need be made when I come. 3 Then, when I arrive, I will send those whom you approve, with letters of explanation, to carry your gift to Jerusalem. 4 And if it seems better for me to go, they will go with me.

5 I will visit you after passing through Macedonia, for I want to go only through Macedonia. 6 I would like to stay with you for a while, and perhaps I will spend the winter so that you may help me on my way wherever I go. 7 I do not want to see you now, just in passing, for I really hope to stay with you, if the Lord permits. 8 But I will stay in Ephesus until Pentecost, because I have a door wide open here, even though there are many opponents.

9 When Timothy comes, make him... feel at ease with you. Consider that, like me, he is working for the Lord.
11 Let no one look down on him. Help him continue his journey, so that he may return to me without difficulties. I am expecting him with the brothers.
12 With respect to our brother Apollos, I have strongly urged him to visit you with the brothers, but he did not want to go at all; he will visit you at his first opportunity.
13 Be alert, stand firm in the faith, be courageous, be strong.
14 Let love be in all.
15 Now, brothers and sisters, you know that in Achaia, there is none better than Stephanas and his family, and that they have devoted themselves to the service of the holy ones.
16 I urge you to be subject to such persons, and to anyone who works and toils with them.
17 I am glad about the coming of Stephanas, Fortunatus and Achaicus, who were able to represent you.
18 In fact, they appeased my spirit and yours. Appreciate persons like them.
19 The churches of Asia greet you. Aquila and Prisca greet you in the Lord, as does the church that gathers in their house.
20 All the brothers and sisters greet you. Greet one another with a holy kiss.
21 The greeting is from me, Paul, in my own hand.
22 A curse on anyone who does not love the Lord! Marana-tha! Come, Lord!
23 The grace of the Lord Jesus be with you.
24 My love to all, in Christ Jesus.
At the end of his first letter to the Corinthians Paul expressed the desire to come back and see them soon. He was unable to return, and they took this badly.

“Judaizing” preachers, that is to say, those Jews insufficiently converted to Christ, whom Paul had to face all the time, were trying to undermine his authority. Paul sent a messenger whom the Corinthians deeply offended: some members of the community were openly rebelling against the apostle. Paul responded in a letter “written in the midst of tears” (2:4) whereby he demanded the submission of the community. One of Paul’s best assistants, Titus, brought the letter and concluded his mission successfully. Upon Titus’ return, Paul, reassured, sent this “second” letter (in fact it was the third or fourth) to the Corinthians.

What is the content of this letter? What Paul feels with regard to the Corinthians and what he suffers from their lack of understanding. It is not much and yet it is a great deal. Paul is incapable of speaking about himself without speaking of Christ. This restless man, eager for understanding and affection, is so permeated with the love of Christ, that he cannot express a suspicion or a reproach without giving most profound sermons on faith. In trying to justify himself he writes the most beautiful pages on evangelization and on what it means to be an apostle of Christ.

We shall see that this letter includes pages which were not a part of it—fragments of other letters or notes sent by Paul to the Church of Corinth: in particular, 6:14-18 was probably written before our First Letter to the Corinthians; Chapter 9 (see commentary of 9:1); Chapters 10–13 which should contain a good part of the “letter written in tears” (see preceding paragraph).
1 Paul, an apostle of Christ Jesus, by the will of God, and Timothy, our brother, to the church of God in Corinth, and to all the saints in the whole of Achaia. 2 May you receive grace and peace from God, our Father, and from Christ Jesus, the Lord.

Blessed be God, the source of all comfort

3 Blessed be God, the Father of Christ Jesus, our Lord, the all-merciful Father, and the God of all comfort! He encourages us in all our trials, so that we may also encourage those in any trial, with the same comfort that we receive from God.

4 For whenever the sufferings of Christ overflow to us, so, through Christ, a great comfort also overflows. 5 So, if we are afflicted, it is for your comfort and salvation; and if we receive comfort it is also for you. You may experience the same comfort when you come to endure the same sufferings we endure. 6 Our hope for you is most firm; just as you share in our sufferings, so shall you also share in our consolation.

8 Brothers and sisters, we want you to know some of the trials we experienced in the province of Asia. We were crushed; it was too much; it was more than we could bear and we had already lost all hope of coming through alive. 9 We felt branded for death, but this happened that we might no longer rely on ourselves but on God, who raises the dead. 10 He freed us from such a deadly peril and will continue to do so. We trust he will continue protecting us, but you must help us with your prayers. When such a favor is obtained by the intercession of many, so will there be many to give thanks to God on our behalf.

The plans of Paul

12 There is something we are proud of: our conscience tells us that we have lived in this world with the openness and sincerity that comes from God. We have been guided, not by human motives, but by the grace of God, especially in relation to you.

13 There were no hidden intentions in my letter, but only what you can read and understand. 14 I trust that what you now only partly realize, you will come to understand fully, and so be proud of us, as we shall also be proud of you on the Day of the Lord Jesus.

15 With this assurance, I wanted to go and visit you first and this would have been a double blessing for you, for I would have left you to go through Macedonia, and I would have come back to you on my way back from Macedonia, and you would have sent me on my way to Judea. 17 Have
I planned this without thinking at all? Or do I change my decisions on the spur of the moment, so that I am between No and Yes?

18 God knows that our dealing with you is not Yes and No, just as the Son of God, Christ Jesus, whom we—Silvanus, Timothy and I—preach to you, was not Yes and No; with him it was simply Yes. 20 In him all the promises of God have come to be a Yes, and we also say in his name: Amen! giving thanks to God. 21 God, himself, has anointed us and strengthens us, with you, to serve Christ; 22 he has marked us with his own seal, in a first outpouring of the Spirit, in our hearts.

Paul refers to a scandal

• 23 God knows, and I swear to you by my own life, that if I did not return to Corinth, it was because I wanted to spare you. 24 I do not wish to lord it over your faith, but to contribute to your happiness; for regarding faith, you already stand firm.

These words as we do for Jeremiah (20:7): this irresistible call of God is in fact the access to a higher form of freedom.

The triumph was the occasion for offering a lot of incense: the perfume was the sign of glory for the one who was being honored rather like a god, a sign of death for the prisoners who were there. This comparison allowed Paul to continue in another direction: for some it smells of death (2:16). The Gospel divides people. Even without going deeper into the mystery they are able to appreciate the "odor," namely the style of Christian existence. Some are especially aware of the demands of Christian life, which to them seems a death. Others, on the contrary, envy the mysterious force that animates believers in the midst of their trials, and letting them understand that life is there.

Who is worthy of such a mission? (v. 17). In seeing this, the apostle feels inadequate for his mission. He would like everyone to recognize Christ and the radiance of his love through him, but he is a long way from that! On the contrary, the false apostle does not even think about that, but only wishes to be approved and to make money out of the word of God by hiding its demands: such apostles are famous and are not persecuted by anyone!
in everything. The one you forgive, I also forgive. And what I forgave, if, indeed, I had anything to forgive, I forgave, for your sake, in the presence of Christ, lest Satan take advantage of us; for we know his designs.

We are the fragrance of Christ

12 So I came to Troas to preach the gospel of Christ, and the Lord opened doors for me. However, I could not be at peace because I did not find my brother Titus there. So I took leave of them and went to Macedonia.

14 Thanks be to God, who always leads us in the triumphant following of Christ and, through us, spreads the knowledge of him everywhere, like an aroma. We are Christ’s fragrance, rising up to God, and perceived by those who are saved, as well as by those who are lost. To the latter, it smells of death and leads them to death. To others, it is the fragrance of life and leads to life.

17 But who is worthy of such a mis-

The great dignity of Christ’s ministers

3 • 1 Am I, again, commending my-

3.1 The preachers who oppose Paul would show letters of recommendation given by some community or some apostle. Whereas Paul relies on personal authority which doesn’t owe anything to anyone. Christ himself made him an apostle as he said in several places. The pagans of that time surrounded their priests with honor and esteem, and so did the Jews. Throughout Scripture the honor of teaching the law of God is highlighted and more so the unique role of Moses, who received the law from God on Sinai. Yet an apostle of Christ is much greater than these.

How much more glorious will the ministry of the Spirit be! (v. 8). As Paul showed in Romans 7:1-13, teaching only the law as the Jewish priests did, was not a great help to people since, because they are sinners, they do not obey the law and deserve their punishment. Whereas Paul brings believers into live communication with Christ and his Spirit so that, from then on, they can also share in the risen life. The apostles and ministers of the Church fulfill a major role if their words and actions are helpful in uplifting people.

In verses 7-13 Paul refers to the traditions found in the Book of Exodus (Ex 34:29-35). These highlighted Moses’ glory, but Paul mentions them to prove that Christ’s apostles are superior. There is a reference to Moses returning from his encounter with God with his face radiant; but Paul remarks that it did not last. Moses had to cover his face with a veil because his face was so radiant, but Paul notes that when a veil must be used, God does not yet fully reveal himself.

Paul underlines the blindness of the Jews who do not recognize Christ as the promised Savior: they have lost the key to their history and for them Scripture remains a closed book until the day when God, through Christ, gives them its true meaning (Lk 24:27; Rev 5:1). All their history should be understood as a mystery of death and resurrection. To enter into a new Covenant they had to welcome Christ without concern for their own privileges, and become his disciples together with other nations.

We are unlike Moses (v. 13). What a daring affirmation! Moses was the founder of the Jewish people and the supreme authority of the Jewish Scripture! It is a fact that the least among Christians reflects with unveiled face the glory of the Lord. The Christian is the light of Christ and in earlier times those baptized were called “the enlightened.”

The Lord is Spirit. Paul says this twice in verses 17 and 18. He does not confuse Lord, Christ, with Holy Spirit but plays with the words spirit
We carry this treasure in vessels of clay

1 Since this is our ministry, mercifully given to us, we do not weaken. 2 We refuse to stay with half-truths through fear; we do not behave with cunning, or falsify the message of God, but, manifesting the truth, we commend ourselves to the conscience of everyone, in the sight of God.

3 In fact, if the gospel we proclaim remains obscure, it is obscure only for those who go to their own destruction. 4 The god of this world has blinded the minds of these unbelievers, lest they see the radiance of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is God’s image. 5 It is not ourselves we preach, but Christ Jesus, as Lord; and, for Jesus’ sake, we are your servants. 6 God, who said, Let the light shine out of darkness, has also made the light shine in our and Spirit. He recalls that the person who turns to the Lord (v. 16) goes beyond a first stage of faith (that Paul calls the letter) where he found God through laws and practices. He enters the adult age of spiritual life where, through God’s Spirit, we know ourselves and act towards God like sons and daughters and free persons. So Paul means: To find the Lord is to receive the Spirit and accede to the “spirit” (see Rom 2:29).

• 4.1 It is worthwhile underlining some features of the portrait of an apostle as Paul sketches it:

  - We do not lose heart.
  - We do not proceed with trickery nor do we falsify God’s message.
  - We are more than your servants.
  - We display for everyone to discover in us the glory of God that shines in Christ’s face.
  - We carry the death of Jesus so that his life may be revealed in us.
  - We believe and that is why we speak.

We carry this treasure in vessels of clay (v. 7). Usually, God carries out his plans by using inadequate instruments. Graham Greene became famous for his book “The Power and the Glory” in which we see a priest achieving heroic things despite his many personal faults.

For we, the living, are given up continually to death (v. 11). The apostle’s death is necessary so that his work may live. When a good job has been done in one sector of the Church, there has to come the hour of persecution, or of obedience to leaders whose authority we cannot reject, in spite of the fact that they may be unjust or mistaken. Nothing grows without having died first.
hearts, to radiate, and to make known the glory of God, as it shines in the face of Christ.

7 However, we carry this treasure in vessels of clay, so that this all-surpassing power may not be seen as ours, but as God's. 8 Trials of every sort come to us, but we are not discouraged. 9 We are left without answer, but do not despair; persecuted but not abandoned, knocked down but not crushed. 10 At any moment, we carry, in our person, the death of Jesus, so, that, the life of Jesus may also be manifested in us. 11 For we, the living, are given up continually to death, for the sake of Jesus, so, that, the life of Jesus may appear in our mortal existence. 12 And as death is at work in us, life comes to you.

13 We have received the same spirit of faith referred to in Scripture, that says: I believed and so I spoke. We also believe, and so we speak. 14 We know that he, who raised the Lord Jesus, will also raise us, with Jesus, and bring us, with you, into his presence. 15 Finally, everything is for your good, so that grace will come more abundantly upon you, and great will be the thanksgiving for the glory of God.

We long for our heavenly dwelling

16 Therefore, we are not discouraged. On the contrary, while our outer being wastes away, the inner self is renewed, from day to day. 17 The slight affliction, that quickly passes away, prepares us for an eternal wealth of glory, so great, and beyond all comparison. 18 So, we no longer pay attention to the things that are seen, but to those that are unseen, for the things that we see last for a moment, but that which cannot be seen is eternal.

5 We know that, when our earthly dwelling, or, rather, our tent, is destroyed, we may count on a building from God, a heavenly dwelling, not built by human hands, that lasts forever. 2 Therefore, we long and groan: Why may we not put on this heavenly dwelling over that which we have? 3 (Indeed, are we sure, that, we shall still be wearing our earthly dwelling and not be unclothed?)

4 As long as we are in the field-tent, we, indeed, bemoan our unbearable fate, for we do not want this clothing to be removed from us; we would, rather, put the other, over it, that the mortal body may be absorbed by true life. 5 This is God's purpose for us, and he has given us the Spirit, as a pledge of what we are to receive.

6 So we feel confident always. We know, that, while living in the body, we are exiled from the Lord, 7 living by faith, without seeing; 8 but we dare to think, that we would rather be away... from the body, to go and live with the Lord. 9 So, whether we have to keep this house or lose it, we only wish to please the Lord. 10 Anyway, we all have to appear before the tribunal of Christ, for each one to receive what he deserves, for his good or evil deeds in the present life.

We proclaim the message of reconciliation

- 11 So, we know the fear of the Lord, and we try to convince people, while we live openly before God. And I trust, that you know, in your consscience what we truly are. 12 Once more, we do not try to win your es-teen; we want to give you a reason to feel proud of us, that you may respond to those who heed appearances and not the reality. 13 Now, if I have spoken foolishly, let God alone hear; if what I have said makes sense, take it for yourselves.

14 Indeed, the love of Christ holds may perhaps provide even further reasons for increasing it. Jesus experienced a strange agony before being arrested. This trial is only temporary and faith is reassuring “Who will separate us from the love of God?” (Rom 8:35-39).

- 5.11 There are many ways of understanding faith: for each one of us, one or other aspect of Christian life makes more of an impact. What Paul sees in Christ is the great messenger and artisan of reconciliation.

His first conviction is that, with the death of Christ, a new age has begun for divided humanity. If he died for all, all have died (v. 14), namely, the whole history and wisdom of people before him have been surpassed and now
God works among us in other ways.

We do not regard anyone from the human point of view (v. 16). Paul confines something of his affective life. Those around him love him, even if they make difficulties for him, and in the Church each one has his friends, those on whom he may count. Paul loves them, but doubtless not all in the same way. To begin with, he accepts persons with different criteria and is not guided (as are many Corinthians) by the appearance of fine speakers (v. 12). And his affectivity has been renewed in the measure that he has been possessed by Christ: he loves them as God loves them and as God would like them to be.

Even if we once knew Christ personally...
(v. 16). (Paul says: “If we have known him in the flesh” or, as he was in his humanity.) He no longer sees Christ as a Galilean preacher, enclosed in the context of Jewish life, but rather dominating history. Without a doubt he is also alluding to certain adversaries who consider themselves superior to him because they have known Jesus or belong to his family. He says to them: “we must” (which means: you must) see him differ-ently: do not see him as your cousin!

The one who is in Christ is a new creature (v. 17): first because the barriers that divide and separate people no longer exist for him (see Gal 3:27; Eph 2:14-16). Also because it is not human desires that guide him, but the Spirit of God who recreates him at every instant (Gal 5:13-21).

In Christ God reconciled the world with himself (v. 19). Many people like to say: Jesus is love. This is true, but let us not forget that this love is his response to the love of the Father who wishes to reconcile us; we must do away with the idea of an angry God whom Jesus tries to appease (Rom 3:25).

Who entrusted to us the ministry of reconciliation (v. 18). Christians are not satisfied with only singing the praises of God, and their supreme aspiration is not to find a likeable com-numity. They do their part in the task of universal reconciliation that supposes a denunciation you, through us. Let God reconcile you; this, we ask you, in the name of Christ. He had no sin, but God made him bear our sin, so, that, in him, we might share the holiness of God.

6.3 A distinctive sign of the apostle of Christ: the contrast between the treasure entrusted to him for others, and his own existence hardly enviable and truly unenvied. Like Jesus, he is a sign of contradiction. Paul recalls what he must endure, but does not hide his pride and his conviction: we enrich many, and we possess everything!

11. Corinthians! I have spoken to you frankly and I have uncovered my inner thought. My heart is wide open to you, but you feel uneasy, because of your closed heart: repay us with the same measure—I speak to you as to my children—open wide your hearts also.

Have nothing to do with evil

14. Do not make unsuitable covenants with those who do not believe: can justice walk with wickedness? Or can light coexist with darkness, and can there be harmony between Christ and Satan? What union can there be between one who believes and one who does not believe? God’s temple must have no room for idols, and we cross: reconciliation is not achieved without voluntary victims who take on themselves the hatred and the sin of humankind.

6. People can notice, in our upright life, knowledge, patience and kindness, action of the Holy Spirit, sincere love, words of truth, and power of God. So we fight with the weapons of justice, to attack, as well as to defend.

of injustice and sin, and the effort to overcome them. Today the Church says a great deal about this so that we may better understand our mission in the world and in the conflicts and tensions that tear our nations apart.

We present ourselves as ambassadors in the name of Christ (v. 20). This is not only true of the apostles and Paul. It is also meant for us when we go to visit the sick or the needy; when, overcoming suspicion, we approach our brother or sister to create an atmosphere of confidence, so that, shortly, we may arrive at fraternal fellowship with others who have the same problems but who, in spite of that, often remain locked in their selfishness.

He had no sin (v. 21). It is difficult to translate Paul’s words: “He made sin him who did not know sin,” for obviously Paul here speaks according to Hebrew culture where the same word denotes both the sin and the victim who carries the sin. Paul recalls the mystery of the cross: reconciliation is not achieved without voluntary victims who take on themselves the hatred and the sin of humankind.
are the temple of the living God. As Scripture says; I will dwell and live in their midst, I will be their God and they shall be my people.

17 Therefore: Come out from their midst and separate from them, says the Lord. Do not touch anything unclean and I will be gracious to you. I will be a father to you, that you may become my sons and daughters, says the all-powerful God.

7 Since we have such promises, dear friends, let us purify ourselves from all defilement of body and spirit, and complete the work of sanctification, in the fear of God.

Welcome us in your hearts

- 2 Welcome us in your hearts! We have injured no one. We have harmed no one, we have cheated no one. 3 I do not say this to condemn you: I have just said, that you are in our heart, so, that, together, we live, together, we die. 4 I have great confidence in you and I am indeed proud of you. I feel very much encouraged and my joy overflows, in spite of all this bitterness.

5 Know, that, when I came to Macedonia, I had no rest at all, but I was afflicted with all kinds of difficulties: conflict outside and fear within. 6 But God, who encourages the humble, gave me comfort with the arrival of Titus, 7 not only because of his arrival, but, also, because you had received him very well. He told me about your deep affection for me; you were affected by what happened. You worried about me, and this made me rejoice all the more.

8 If my letter caused you pain, I do not regret it. Perhaps I did regret it, for I saw that the letter caused you sadness, for a moment, but, now, I rejoice, 9 not because of your sadness, but because this sadness brought you to repentance. This was a sadness from God, so, that, no evil came to you, because of me. 10 Sadness from God brings firm repentance, that leads to salvation, and brings no regret, but worldly grief produces death. 11 See what this sadness from God has produced in you: What concern for me! What apologies! What indignation and fear! What a longing to see me, to make amends and do me justice!

You have fully proved that you were innocent in this matter. 12 In reality, I wrote to you, not on account of the offender or of the offended, but, that you may be conscious of the concern you have for me before God. 13 I was encouraged by this.

In addition to this consolation of mine, I rejoice, especially, to see Titus very pleased with the way you all reassured him. 14 I had no cause to regret my praise of you to him. You know that I am always sincere with you; likewise my praise of you to Titus has been justified. 15 He now feels much more affection for you, as he remembers the obedience of all, and the respect and humility with which you

5:9) Paul recalled a previous message in which he was asking them not to mix with people of immoral behavior. It is quite possible that the present passage comes from that message. Paul himself explains how we should understand these lines when he says in 1 Corinthians 5:10: “I did not tell you to stay away from the sinners of this world (if it were so, you would have to leave this world), but from the believers who went back to their pagan customs.” 7.2 Welcome us in your hearts. Here again the affective side of Paul is revealed. This indefatigable missionary, never overcome or discouraged, was at the same time very sensitive. Paul here recalls the incident we have spoken of in the introduction. Thanks to Paul’s letter, which must have been harsh, the Corinthians were converted, followed Paul and dealt with those who attacked him.

The collection for those in Jerusalem

Now, I want you to know about a gift of divine grace among the Churches of Macedonia. While they were so afflicted and persecuted, their joy overflowed, and their extreme poverty turned into a wealth of generosity. According to their means—even beyond their means—they wanted to share, in helping the saints.

They asked us for this favor, spontaneously, and with much insistence, and, far beyond anything we expected, they put themselves at the disposal of the Lord, and of us by the will of God. Accordingly, I urged Titus to complete, among you, this work of grace, since he began it with you.

You excel in everything: in the gifts of faith, speech and knowledge; you feel concern for every cause and, besides, you are first in my heart. Excel, also, in this generous service.

This is not a command; I make known to you the determination of others, to check the sincerity of your fraternal concern. You know well, the generosity of Christ Jesus, our Lord. Although he was rich, he made himself poor, to make you rich, through his poverty.

I only make a suggestion, because you were the first, not only in cooperating, but in beginning this project a year ago. So complete this work and, according to your means, carry out what you decided, with much enthusiasm. When there is a good disposition, everything you give is welcomed, and no one longs for what you do not have. I do not mean that others should be at ease and you burdened. Strive for equality; at present, give from your abundance what they are short of, and, in some way, they, also, will give from their abundance, what you lack. Then, you will be equal and what Scripture says shall come true: To the one who had much, nothing was in excess; to the one who had little, nothing was lacking.

Blessed be God, who inspires Titus with such care for you! He not only listened to my appeal but he wanted to go and see you on his own initiative. I am sending with him the brother who has gained the esteem of the churches in the work of the gospel; moreover, they appointed him to travel with us in this blessed work we are carrying on, for the glory of the Lord, but, also, because of our personal enthusiasm.

We decided on this, so that, no one could suspect us, with regard to this generous fund that we are administering. Let us see to it, that all may appear clean, not only before God but also before people. We also send with them, another brother, who, on several occasions, has shown us his zeal and, now, is more enthusiastic, because of his confidence in you.

23 You, then, have Titus, our companion and minister, to serve you, and, with him, you have our brothers, representatives of the churches, and a glory to Christ. 24 Show them how you love, and prove, before the churches, all the good things I said to them about you.

More about the collection

9 • 1 It is not necessary for me to write to you about assistance to the saints. 2 I know your readiness and I praised you before the Macedonians. I said, “In Achaia they have been ready for the collection since last year.” And your enthusiasm carried most of them along. 3 So I send you these brothers of ours. May all my praise of you not fall flat in this case! May you be ready, as I said. 4 If some Macedonians come with me, let them not find you unprepared. What a shame for me—and perhaps for you—after so much confidence!

5 So I thought it necessary to ask our brothers to go ahead of us and see you, to organize this blessed work you have promised. It shall come from your generosity and not be an imposed task.

6 Remember: the one who sows meagerly will reap meagerly, and there shall be generous harvests for the one who sows generously. 7 Each of you should give as you decided personally, and not reluctantly, as if obliged. God loves a cheerful giver. 8 And God is able to fill you with every good thing, so that you have enough of everything, at all times, and may give abundantly for any good work.

9 Scripture says: He distributed, he gave to the poor, his good works last forever. 10 God, who provides the sower with seed, will also provide him with the bread he eats. He will multiply the seed for you and also increase the interest on your good works. 11 Become rich in every way, and give abundantly. What you give will become, through us, a thanksgiving to God.

12 For this sacred relief, after providing the saints with what they need, will result in much thanksgiving to God. 13 This will be a test for them; they will give thanks, because you obey the requirements of Christ’s gospel and share generously with them, and with all. 14 They shall pray to God for you, and feel affection for you, because the grace of God overflows in you. 15 Yes, thanks be to God, for his indescribable gift!

Paul’s defense and admonition

10 • 1 It is I, Paul, who, by the humility and kindness of Christ, appeal to you; the Paul “who is timid among you and bold when far away from you!”

2 Do not force me to act boldly when I come, as I am determined, and will dare to act against some people, who think that I act from human motives. 3 Human is our condition, but not our fight.
Our weapons for this fight are not human, but they have divine power, to destroy strongholds—those arguments and haughty thoughts that oppose the knowledge of God. We compel all understanding, that they obey Christ. So, I am prepared to punish any disobedience, when you should show perfect obedience.

See things as they really are. If someone is convinced that he belongs to Christ, let him consider, that, just as he is Christ’s, so am I. Although, I may seem too confident in the authority that the Lord gave me for building you up and not for pulling you down, I will not be put to shame for saying this. Do not think that I can only frighten you with letters. “His letters are severe and strong,” some say, “but as he is, he has no presence and he is a poor speaker.” To such people I say, “Be careful: what my letters say from afar, is what I will do when I come.”

How could I venture to equate or compare myself with some people, who proclaim their own merits? Fools! They measure themselves with their own measure, and compare themselves with themselves. As for me, I will not boast beyond measure, for I will not go past the limits that the God of true measure has set for me: He gave the measuring stick when he made me set foot in your place.

It is not the same when someone goes beyond his field, to where he has not been able to set foot. But I am he who first reached you with the gospel of Christ. I am not making myself important where others have worked. On the contrary, we hope that, as your faith increases, so too, our area of ministry among you will be enlarged, without going beyond our limit.
we shall bring the gospel to places beyond yours, without entering into the field of others, or boasting, and making ourselves important, where the work is already done. \textit{Let the one who boasts, boast in the Lord.} \textit{It is not the one who}

\textbf{11.7} \text{In Chapters 11 and 12, Paul will compare himself to the “apostles” who managed to be appreciated by the Corinthians, and on which his opponents are relying. Paul wants not to treat them as equal to equal: he is conscious of who he is, he can judge them. A dangerous position, even for someone who believes he is truly inspired by God! And yet, in 1 Corinthians 2:14-15, “...the spiritual person judges everything but no one judges him.”}

To begin with, Paul is sure of a direct call from Christ: this contact with the risen Jesus has given him a transforming presence of Christ. He knows that his criteria, his decisions, his prophetic intuition have bypassed his adversaries. It is precisely because he has reached a superior level of life in the Spirit that he feels free vis-à-vis the “religious obligations” that are given such importance, even first place, by his opponents: compare paragraph 11:4-6 with Galatians 2:6-10 and 5:7-12; see also 1 Thessalonians 3:2-11.

Their attachment to the observance of the Jewish law does not come from a different, legitimate view of matters of faith. They hold to it, because in their own lives, they have not discovered the best of Christian experience. Jesus had already shown, as in the case of the Pharisees that strict observance of religious rites comes from a lack of true faith (Mk 7:6). Whoever has the experience of life in the Spirit, shocks, without wishing to do so, any “religious” people and such was the case of Paul in the Church.

In verses 22-30, Paul speaks of his labors and the risks he has taken, the persecutions he has known. He does not do this to be well thought of. He wants to show others, and remind himself, that he is gifted with an exceptional grace. All are called to follow Jesus and carry his cross, all are called to evangelize. Why is it that so few undertake the true work of evangelization among “those who are afar,” as Jesus and Paul did? That in itself is a grace, and those who have not received it do not perceive the calls and miss the occasions. Paul intends to remain inimitable, not through vainglory but in fidelity to the way in which Christ has placed him.
as an angel of light, "his servants can easily disguise themselves as ministers of salvation, until they receive what their deeds deserve.

16 I say again: Do not take me for a fool, but if you do take me as such, bear with me, that I may sing my own praises a little. 17 I will not speak with the Lord’s authority, but as a fool, bringing my own merits to prominence. 18 As some people boast of human advantages, I will do the same. 19 Fortunately, you bear rather well with fools, you, who are so wise! 20 You tolerate being enslaved, and exploited, robbed, treated with contempt and slapped in the face. 21 What a shame, that I acted so weakly with you!

But if others are so bold, I shall also dare, although I may speak like a fool. 22 Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they Israelites? So am I. Are they descendants of Abraham? So am I. 23 Are they ministers of Christ? (I begin to talk like a madman) I am better than they.

Better than they, with my numerous labors. Better than they, with the time spent in prison. The beatings I received are beyond comparison. How many times have I found myself in danger of death! 24 Five times, the Jews sentenced me to thirty-nine lashes. 25 Three times, I was beaten with a rod. Once I was stoned. Three times, I was shipwrecked; and once, I spent a night and a day, adrift on the high seas.

26 I have been continually in hazards of traveling; because of rivers, because of bandits, because of my fellow Jews, or because of the pagans; in danger, in the city, in the open country, at sea; in danger from false brothers. 27 I have worked, and often labored without sleep, I have been hungry and thirsty and starving, cold, and without shelter.

28 Besides these, and other things, there was my daily concern for all the churches. 29 Who is weak, that I do not feel weak as well? Whoever stumbles, am I not on hot bricks?

30 If it is necessary to boast, let me proclaim the occasions on which I was found weak. 31 The God and Father of Jesus the Lord—may he be blessed for ever!—knows that I speak the truth. 32 At Damascus, the governor under king Aretas placed the city under guard in order to arrest me, and I had to be let down in a basket, through a window in the wall. In that way, I slipped through his hands.

Extraordinary graces

12 • 1 It is useless to boast; but if I have to, I will go on, to some visions and revelations of the Lord.

1 I know a certain Christian: fourteen years ago he was taken up to the third heaven. 2 Whether in the body or out of the body, I do not know, God knows.

APOSTOLATE AND CONtemplATION

• 12.1 Here Paul briefly alludes to the ecstasies through which he has been formed anew. The word ecstasy seems to many people rather eccentric; for others it is only appropriate for contemplative living apart from the world. It is quite true that ecstasy, if genuine, is relevant to contemplative life. But what is contemplation?

By “contemplation” we often understand the time given to meditation on the things of God and the discovery of his presence in our lives. In this sense we oppose contemplation to action, or we say that both should go together. Yet the word “contemplation” also and more rightly denotes a new stage in spiritual life where the relationship between our spirit and God are profoundly changed.

In this contemplation, it is not we who discover God or who establish ourselves in silence. God is the one who imposes his presence, who, in us, gives birth to our response. Contemplation is a gift of God; it is a way of knowing God, of being guided, reformed by him that is different from what the majority of Christians experience.
But I know that this man, whether in the body or out of the body—I do not know, God knows—was taken up to Paradise, where he heard words that cannot be told: things which humans cannot express.

5 Of that man I can indeed boast, but of myself I will not boast except of my weaknesses. 6 If I wanted to boast, it would not be foolish of me, for I would speak the truth. 7 However, I better give up, lest somebody think more of me than what is seen in me, or heard from me. Lest I become proud, after so many and extraordinary revelations; I was given a thorn in my flesh, a true messenger of Satan, to slap me in the face. 8 Three times, I prayed to the Lord, that it leave me, 9 but he answered, “My grace is enough for you; my great strength is revealed in weakness.”

Gladly, then, will I boast of my weakness, that the strength of Christ may be mine. 10 So I rejoice, when I suffer infirmities, humiliations, want, persecutions: all for Christ! For when I am weak, then I am strong.

11 I have acted as a fool but you forced me. You should have been the ones commending me. Yet I do not feel outdone by those super-apostles, even though I am nothing. All the signs of a true apostle are found in me: patience in all trials, signs, miracles and wonders.

13 Now, in what way were you not treated like the rest of the churches? Only in this: I was not a burden to you—forgive me for this offense!

This is my third visit to you

14 For the third time, I plan to visit you, and I will not be a burden to you, for I am not interested in what you have, but only in you. Children should not have to collect money for their parents, but the parents, for their children. 15 As for me, I am ready to spend whatever I have, and even my whole self, for all of you. If I love you so much, am I to be loved less?

16 Well, I was not a burden to you, but was it not a trick to deceive you? Tell me: 17 Did I take money from you through any of my messengers? 18 I asked Titus to go to you and I sent another brother with him. But did hypotheses have been offered on what this thorn could be: an illness perhaps (2 Cor 1:8; Gal 4:13) of which the unforeseen relapses reduced him to powerlessness? Or a temptation of the “flesh,” a late consequence of his moral education as rigid as the commandments of the law? What is certain is that we all aspire to a state of peace in which we feel sure of ourselves, but God for his part, whatever the richness of his gifts, refuses to grant it (1 Cor 2:5; 4:7).

It is not exceptional. The transforming and sovereign action of the Spirit is there more efficacious, leading always to the same end: the individual no longer belongs to himself.

This contemplation may be given to those who have retired to convents to answer a call from God; it may be given to those who live the normal life of most people; it is given to apostles. Differing from the practice of transcendental meditation and recollection that come from the East, it eludes our efforts; it is not a matter of leading either a more active or a more retired life. What is essential is that God has taken possession of our liberty (see Jer 1:5).

If Paul has been the apostle we know, if he has had an exceptional understanding of the Christian mystery, it is because he has been a great contemplative—in the sense we have just given. The ecstasies about which he has spoken correspond to the early years following his conversion (see Acts 22:6 and 17); they are proper to an advanced stage of contemplative life, but not the last, which is total and constant union with God.

I was given a thorn in my flesh (v. 7). Many Titus take money from you? Have we not both acted in the same spirit?

19 Perhaps you think that we are again apologizing; but no: we speak in Christ and before God, and I do this for you, dear friends, to build you up.

20 I fear that, if I go and see you, I might not find you as I would wish, and you, in turn, might not find me to your liking. I might see rivalries, envy, grudges, disputes, slanders, gossip, conceit, disorder.

21 Let it not be, that, in coming again to you, God humiliates me because of you, and I have to grieve over so many of you, who live in sin, on seeing that, they have not yet given up an impure way of living, their wicked conduct, and the vices they formerly practiced.

13 This will be my third visit to you. Any charge must be decided upon by the declaration of two or three witnesses.

2 I have said and I say again, being still far away, just as I did on my second visit, I say, to you who lived in sin, as well as to the rest: when I return to you, I will not have pity.

3 You want to know if Christ is speaking through me? So you will. He is not used to dealing weakly with you, but rather he acts with power.

4 If he was crucified in his weakness, now he lives by the strength of God; and so we are weak with him, but we will be well alive with him, because God acts powerfully with you.

5 Examine yourselves: are you acting according to faith? Test yourselves. Can you assert that Christ Jesus is in you? If not, you have failed the test.

6 I hope you recognize that we ourselves have not failed it.

7 We pray God, that you may do no wrong, not that we wish to be acknowledged, but we want you to do right, even if, in this, we appear to have failed.

8 For we do not have power against the truth, but only for the truth.

9 We rejoice, if we are weak, while you are strong, for all we hope, is that you become perfect.

10 This is why I am writing now, so that when I come, I may not have to act strictly, and make use of the authority the Lord has given me for building up, and not for destroying.

11 Finally, brothers and sisters, be happy, strive to be perfect, have courage, be of one mind and live in peace. And the God of love and peace will be with you.

12 Greet one another with a holy kiss. All the saints greet you.

13 The grace of Christ Jesus the Lord, the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you all.
